"GO AWAY TO STOP SCANDAL"

ADVICE GIVEN BY

COOPER TO WIFE

Husband of Woman Charged With Murder of Young Northey Declares He Believed Nothing Wrong of Her, But Both Wished to Check Gossip of the Neighbors.

Special to the Boston American.

AUGUSTA, Me., April 12.—Edwin J. Cooper, on the witness stand in defence of his wife, Alice F. Cooper, charged with the murder of Charles Northey, today declared that he had advised his wife to leave home for a time in order that the neighbors might stop their talk about the young man's attentions to her.

"Did you think," asked Attorney General Hamlin, "that your wife's relations with Northey had reached that point where it would be better for her to go away?"

"Yes," replied the husband.

Listening to his every word, occasionally nodding her head in support of what he said, Mrs. Cooper sat in the courtroom to-day much improved in spirits since her husband began his testimony. The frank statements of the witness have apparently made a deep impression on the jury, and those who have watched the trial believe that Cooper has materially helped his wife's case.

WANTED TO STOP GOSSIP OF NEIGHBORS.

Cooper told the story of his wife's arrangements to go away in a simple, straightforward manner when he took the stand. He said:

"We thought it would be a good, easy way of settling the matter. It was much more on the neighbors' account than on my own. I had no fear that their relations were improper. My wife and I wanted to end it as easily as possible without any disturbance.

"It was decided that eleven-year-old Velma could look after the house.

"After our plans were made, Alice went over to the desk and wrote a letter to the Insane Asylum at Taunton, Mass., asking for work. She read it to me and I went back to work in the shop. She mailed the letter and then joined me in the shop and we continued to plan about the best way to end an affair which had grown to proportions neither of us realized."

Q. What further conversation, if any, did you have with your wife about her going away to work? Mr. Hamlin objected, but was overruled.

A.—We saw this ad in the Banger Commercial and we thought her going away would be an easy way of settling the matter.

Q.—Where was she when this talk occurred? A.—Sitting on my knee.

BETTER FOR WIFE TO GO.

Q.—Did you see the reply she received? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Did you have a talk with her then? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was it?

Mr. Hamlin objected and the question was excluded. Mr. Heath took an exception.

"Did you think," asked Mr. Hamlin, directing them to feed the poor.

"I shall be glad indeed to act as custodian of funds subscribed by residents of Boston and New England, either received through the BOSTON AMERICAN or forwarded direct to the Italian consulate at No. 153 Milk Street, Boston."—Baron Gustave Tosti, L.LD., M.D., Consul at Boston for Italy.

W. R. Hearst Calls Upon Mayor Fitzgerald to Help

RELIEVE VOLCANO VICTIMS

Fitzgerald Immediately Sends for Baron Fosti, Chairman of the Local Relief Committee—Aid Must Be Extended at Once or It Will Be Too Late to Save Thousands from Starving.

Mayor John F. Fitzgerald to-day received from Congressman William R. Hearst the following telegram, requesting him to aid in the national work of succoring the Italians stricken by the eruption of Vesuvius:

Chairman Hearst's Appeal.

New York, April 11, 1906.

To John F. Fitzgerald, Mayor of Boston, Massachusetts:

In behalf of the stricken people in Southern Italy, the Italian Relief Committee appeals to you and the people of your city for contributions. Hundreds, perhaps thousands, of lives have been blotted out. Populous villages and towns have been overwhelmed by the eruption of Vesuvius.

Those afflicted are chiefly poor peasants. Many Americans who have witnessed the courage and hard work of these people living at the foot of the mountain of fire will wish to prove their sympathy in a practical fashion.

We ask you to appoint a committee of citizens in your locality to cooperate with us. Contributions sent to the Italian Relief Committee, as below, will be duly acknowledged and made payable to William Randolph Hearst, chairman; John Palmieri, John Lordi, Angelos Leonilo, Felici Tecci, Augustino Sbarbara, Joseph N. Francolini, Charles Valgalupo and James E. March.

(Signed) WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

Mayor to Join in Relief Work.

When Mayor Fitzgerald received this telegram he immediately endited this letter:

Mayor's Office, Boston, Mass., April 12, 1906.

Count Onorato Gaetani, Italian Consul, 219 Hanover street, Boston:

My Dear Sir—Idesire to consult with you at once relative to the part to be aken by this city in aiding the stricken people in the vicinity of Mount Vesuvius, in Italy. Kindly communicate with this office at your earliest convenience and I will arrange for a conference. Sincerely yours,

JOHN F. FITZGERALD, Mayor.

The letter was delivered to Count Gaetani, formerly consul for Italy in this city, and by him will be turned over to Baron Gustavo Tosti, the present representative of Italy.

BARON TOSTI HEADS RELIEF WORK HERE

Baron Gustavo Tosti, the Italian Consul, will head the committee which is being organized to cooperate with the general committee of which Congressman William Randolph Hearst is chairman, for the relief of the thousands of suffering Italians whose homes were destroyed by the eruption of Mount Vesuvius.

A strong and vigorous campaign will be started in a committee of fifteen of the most prominent Italian residents of the city to raise money for the immediate alleviation of the distress of those who are now refugees.

Baron Tosti's home is in Naples. He knows the horrors that must have resulted from the eruptions of the great volcano, the distress that must have been caused. He has appealed to all of his countrymen to respond at once to the humanitarian effort to relieve such suffering as they can.

Appeals to All Americans.

The work of relief appeals not only to natives of Italy, but to Americans as well. Boston has always responded to the call for help, no matter whence it came. This time the city will not be found lacking in the generosity that has always characterized its citizens.

Thousands are homeless, starving, in need of immediate help. The response to the appeals of Baron Tosti and his associates should be immediate.

Dispatches from Naples say that the city is filled with refugees. The hail of cinders from Vesuvius has again commenced. The waters of the Bay of Naples are stirred as by a hailstorm of gigantic proportions.

If it has been decided to place the city under martial law, the soldiers and marines have been ordered to preserve order, as it is feared that the starving, homeless villagers, who have been pouring into the city by hundreds, may engage in riot.

The King and Queen are in the city actively engaged in the work of relief. A British squadron has arrived to assist in helping the suffering.

Towns Abandoned.

Nearly all of the Vesuvius towns have been abandoned. The inhabitants were taken off by warships and landed in Naples.

The people are panic-stricken and their fear increases every hour. While fresh disasters have been reported, the consternation is such that no details can be obtained. It is reported that bread riots have broken out at Portici. The troops, although they have received no rations in two days, have managed to quell the disturbances, but with great difficulty.

Each hour sees the disasters increase and the suffering grow more intense.

Many of the railroad lines are blocked, including the main line to Rome.

Associated with Baron Tosti in his campaign of relief for the sufferers in Boston are such men as Councilman Joseph Santosuosso, Christo de Simone, editor of a leading Italian newspaper, Representative George A. Scigliano, Andrew A. Bolarasco, Joseph de Marco and Dr. Ettore Scatelli.

Sends $50 Check.

Representative Scigliano started to-day to stir up Boston's Italians to the need of the emergency. He forwarded a check for $50 to the BOSTON AMERICAN office and with his appreciation of the need for activity.

"I believe in this thing, heartily," said he. "It is a time when we can show here in Boston what we can do for those who are in need. I hope every one of my countrymen will arise to the emergency."

Baron Tosti, after consenting to head the committee for the great work, said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter:

"I endorse this movement to raise funds for the relief of the sufferers in the Mt. Vesuvius disaster most emphatically, and I feel sure that Mr. Hearst is accomplishing good work in giving the Italian nation such a conclusive proof of sympathy and friendship. I have no doubt that the Italians living in this country will appreciate his efforts very warmly.

Expects American Aid.

"I have no doubt also that the Americans will respond to Mr. Hearst's appeal promptly, as I know that our country counts many warm admirers among the citizens of the United States.

"I shall be glad, indeed, to act as custodian of funds subscribed by residents of Boston and New England, either received through the BOSTON AMERICAN or for-

Send Aid Before It Is Too Late

Boston has failed to do its duty so far toward helping the thousands of homeless and starving people who are suffering from the great Vesuvius disaster.

The citizens of New York, Chicago, San Francisco and other places have already raised large sums of money to help the men, women and children who, through no fault of their own, have been made homeless and penniless.

Boston is famous for her philanthropy and is usually among the first to respond in a crisis like this WHICH DEMANDS INSTANT RELIEF.

Money is wanted, and wanted at once. Next week may be too late to save many people who are without food.

Send whatever money you can spare to relieve these suffering people. Do not delay a moment.

The contributions will be accepted by Baron Gustavo Tosti, Italian Consul, at No. 153 Milk street, or by the BOSTON AMERICAN. The funds will then be forwarded to the National Relief Committee in New York, who will see that it gets to the proper persons in the devastated country at once.

KING AT NAPLES TO AID WORK OF RELIEF

NAPLES, April 12.—Mt. Vesuvius continues to spout red hot ashes and cinders, houses are collapsing everywhere and famine and disaster threaten to add to the horrors of the situation in the stricken district. Troops are being rushed to Naples to preserve order and attend to the work of relief.

Frequent detonations are still heard, but faintly, and the hope prevails that the worst of the eruption is over.

The main crater is gradually enlarging. The rain of ashes over the Mediterranean side of the volcano has diminished. The heaviest fall is now over Somma, Sante Anastasia, Pontecilli and other villages in a section opposite and distant from this city.

The presence of King Victor Emmanuel in Naples, which always produced a good effect, has acted as a tonic on the Neapolitans, who have a superstitious veneration for him. From early in the day crowds gathered before the palace, where news were heard to exclaim:

"Long Live the King."

"He comes, but the Pope stays at home. Long live the King!"

This feeling, however, does not interfere with the Neapolitan veneration for their saints. A woman in the crowd before the palace was heard to confide in a friend as follows:

"My daughter, who lives at Torre del Greco, is a refugee. She has been received into the royal palace, lives like a princess, and has been spoken to by the Queen. May the saints protect her majesty."

The King left Naples early to-day for San Giuseppe, Ottajano and Terzigno, in order to ascertain personally the actual situation at those towns. He hoped to be able to continue his journey to Sarno and Castellamare. He inspected all the Camp hospitals en route, which the troops are caring for sufferring refugees, speaking to the injured, comforting them in their misfortunes and asking them what he could do to relieve their distress.

On receiving a reply indicating a sufferer's desire that something be immediately done in his or her behalf, he gave orders to have the desire fulfilled. This gave rise to many heartrending scenes, As the King bent over a poor man, with coal blackened hands, whose right leg had been amputated, the sufferer replying to his question regarding his immediate necessities, said with tears in his eyes, "Send me my son, who is serving as a soldier."

Grasps Sufferer's Hand.

The King, who was visibly affected, clasped the man's hand and exclaimed, "My poor fellow! I can do much, but to grant your request would mean breaking the laws, which I must be the first to respect. I would give anything I have were it possible for so doing to send your son to you, but I cannot do so."

There were tears in the King's eyes as he turned away from the sorrowing father's bedside.

The Queen, while the King was away, visited the charitable institutions here and inspected the places where the refugees are housed.

In spite of the fact that many government officials have arrived to reinforce the local officers, the congestion of the telegraph bureaus is indescribable. A telegram sent from Paris at 6 p. m. yesterday was not delivered until 9 a. m.

GHOULS AT WORK.

A new horror has been added to the already terrible situation in that ghouls are now busy in the towns from which the danger has shifted for the present and along the highways looting in such towns and villages.

A horde of thieves has invaded these towns and 200 arrests have been made. The ghouls not only have plundered the deserted houses of refugees, but they do not hesitate to rob the bodies of the dead lying in the villages or along the roads.

MATTUCCI'S EXPERIENCE.

Professor Mattucci, who is still at his post in charge of the Vesuvius Observatory, sent the following message to-day:

"We have passed days and nights as in an inferno. Hundreds of times our lives have been in danger. Many of the instruments have been broken, nevertheless I have been able to obtain excellent scientific results. On Saturday I observed that the whole central crater had been in the air, while the summit of the mountain afterward was lower by 200 metres. Thousands of millions of tons of material have been thrown in all directions, and the configuration of the country has been considerably altered."

The inhabitants of this city are enduring the yellow-gray atmosphere of yesterday, which is even more oppressive than before. The popular costume of those who can afford it consists of automobile coats, caps and goggles, which enable the wearer to maintain a semblance of cleanliness, but the people generally have to be contented with paper masks and raised umbrellas. The motormen of trolley cars are wearing masks of some transparent material under the visors of their caps.

BREAD ISSUED TO SUFFERING PEOPLE

NAPLES, April 12.—The sufferings and anxieties of the people have already led to threatening demonstrations.

The government is using troops to help the people who are in distress. Bread is being issued by the military bakeries to the poor. Hands of workmen have been organized to co-operate with the troops in removing cinders, sand and ashes from the roofs before a rain can increase the already dangerous weight upon them. Soldiers are also acting as carriers of food to the poorest districts and to the refugees.

The stream of lava which was flowing toward Torre del Annunziata was diverted from the cemetery of that place and turned to the left toward Pompeii. One report says the lava has reached Pompeii.

A panic seized the employes of a tobacco factory. Fearing that the roof was about to fall they rushed from the building, causing a great disturbance in the streets.

It is reported from Ottajano, Nola and Somma that new shocks of earthquake have been felt there. Their effect was partly neutralized by the fact that great quantities of ashes be piled up high against the walls and act as a support for them.

The crater is belching out a tremendous torrent of water, mixed with stones and cinders. These cinders are more dangerous than they have been hitherto, as they are much heavier.

The Pope has telegraphed to the clergy

Cooper Declares His Firm Faith in His Wife

From Edwin J. Cooper's Direct Examination.

Q.—After all you have heard and seen of the relations of Northey and your wife, do you think there was anything improper? A.—I do not.

Q.—And why did you speak to your wife? A.—Because I thought that Northey's coming to the house so often would cause the neighbors to talk.

Q.—And that is the only reason why you spoke to your wife? A.—It is.

MORE TIME IN DIRECTORY CASE

Failing to cite authorities in law to support the petition of Sampson, Murdock & Co., for an injunction against Boston Typographical Union, No. 13, Attorney Roger Clapp was allowed time by Judge Fox, in the equity session of the Superior Court to-day, to file a brief. Judge Fox said that he would listen to an oral brief, but Mr. Clapp was not prepared to argue the points raised by Attorney John McDonald for the union.

The petition of the plaintiffs, who are directory publishers, cites that the printing and distribution of a circular by the union, showing that 100,000 organized workers had withheld their names from the firm's canvassers, had been found injurious to their business. It asked for an injunction against the union.

POLICE BAR "PASSION PLAY" GOOD FRIDAY

BERLIN, April 12.—The Oberammergau performers, who are acting in the "Passion Play" here, have been forbidden by the police to perform on Good Friday on the ground that the performances are embraced in the legal definition of "merry-makings."

SCORES LAWYER IN ARSON CASE

Special to the Boston American.

LYNN, April 12.—Though City Marshal Burckes and Patrolman Flanagan say that Mrs. Lottie Driscoll, charged with setting fire to the tenement into which they family was to move the next day, was heard to say that she would not move into that house anyway, Judge Berry scored the government in these words:

"Either this girl is insane or the government has established no motive. It is shown that the family had paid the rent a month in advance, had moved in most of their furniture, on which there was no insurance, and was to take possession the next day."

He continued the case two weeks.

Mrs. Driscoll is the wife of George Driscoll, a boiler. Is only eighteen years old, but is the mother of two children. Patrolman Flanagan arrested her, and says there was kerosene on the walls.

HIT HEAD IN 40-FOOT FALL.

WAGON PUTS AUTO OUT OF BUSINESS

In a collision last night between an automobile numbered 12,007 and a market wagon owned by Wyman Brothers of Arlington, the auto was put out of business. The market wagon was only slightly injured and went on its way. The accident happened on Massachusetts avenue, North Cambridge, almost opposite the police station.

EUROPEAN TOUR ELECTION

SPECIAL BALLOT IS BIG VOTE-GETTER

TEACHERS THUS SUPPORTED MOVE UPWARD QUICKLY IN TOUR CONTEST.

The Special Ballot is proving the big success of the European Tour Election.

Teachers whose friends are sending in Special Ballot orders are making gains most easily and rapidly in the list.

There is absolutely no sense in buying votes. The Special Ballot removes that feature from this popular election of forty teachers, who will be given complimentary Summer tours in Europe and cash awards.

Just write your name and address and favorite teacher on the Special Ballot printed on this page. Send it to the European Tour Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN. Enclose enough money to pay for the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN for the number of Sundays filled in—20 cents for four Sundays, 50 cents for ten Sundays, $1.50 for thirty Sundays, and so forth. The lowest Special Ballot order is for four Sundays. Your choice will then be at once credited with from 50 to 1,000 extra votes.

The votes are in addition to the coupons you may clip out of the papers.

The Sunday paper will be delivered anywhere, whether the newsdealer is named or not.

Shifts in the Voting.

In the voting yesterday Miss Ellenette Pillsbury, the widely honored veteran teacher of East Boston, regained second place in the Greater Boston list, coming up from fifth by a strong vote. Miss Susan Gould went up from tenth to sixth place.

Miss Katherine Moynihan, principal of the Cole School at Berlin, N. H., made the record gain of the day, lengthening her leadership over Miss Isabel Kateon of Bath, Me., in the Northern division of the election.

Miss Elizabeth Sharry took fourth place in the Massachusetts division away from Miss Annie V. McGourty.

Miss Grace J. Allan of Bristol held first place in the Rhode Island and Connecticut division without gaining a vote, but both Miss Oslin and Miss Crofwell of Providence added to their totals and are now close upon the leader.

Hopes of Helpers.

Here are some of the letters received by the European Tour Editor:

One hundred votes for Miss Ellenette Pillsbury of East Boston. She is the teacher I love best since I have gone to school. Hoping she will go to Europe, as I suppose she will, I remain,

A PUPIL, L. C. H.

Seventeen votes for Miss Julia Hurley of the Pleasant School. These are only a few, but "every little helps," and we hope she will get more.

W. E. G.

Please credit Miss Minnie Woodbury with the fifty votes I enclose for her. I hope she will go. She lives in Francestown, teaches in Milford.

Francestown, N. H. ANNIE A. EPPS.

Find enclosed fifty votes for Mrs. Seldis, whose Summer home and many friends are in New Hampshire. Hoping she will win out.—S. M. WENTWORTH, Rochester, N. H.

Please add to Miss Emeline A. Orswell's list 132. Total amount sent this week 873. Next week will see more, and I hope the Special Ballots on the run.—MAUD COOPER.

Favors Reciprocity.

Miss Ida H. Davis treats all her boys nicely, and I guess the same thing ought to be done to her.—PHILIP ROSENBLUM.

Save your votes for Minnie E. Donovan. She wants to go. I know she does. And she's out to win. She deserves it. Send one, send all. She is a gainer sure from 500 to 18,000, and the tour all over Europe. Only a good friend.—L. H. B.

Beneath the hills of Green Mountain State,
Pray let Springfield High get a winning gait.
Esther Meacham, the candidate to be sure,
Whom we'll send on the AMERICAN'S great European Tour.
And on the steamer from Boston the fifth of July
She'll sail to Europe, thanks to the good work of students at Springfield High.

St. Johnsbury is a little ahead, but we'll win
With all our might and vim.
Wake up, Waltham, don't be so slow,
On an European Tour E. M. Brotchie must go.
Here's from some neighbors, to help her along,
A Sunday order Ballot, for 1,000 strong,
And also a few votes, four hundred and ten;
And you shall hear from us soon again.
Waltham. M. M. L.

MRS. COOPER TRIED TO LEAVE HOME TO AVOID INFATUATED NORTHEY

WANTED PLACE IN THE TAUNTON INSANE ASYLUM

She Thought Admiring Youth Would Recover Senses if She Were Away.

HUSBAND'S HONEST STAND

By Eleanor Ames.
Special to the Boston American.

AUGUSTA, Me., April 12.—When a woman is willing to leave her home, her husband, her children and go into a strange city in a strange State to work as an attendant in an insane asylum that a foolish, infatuated young man may have a chance to recover his senses by her absence, it seems to me a pretty good sign that said woman is seriously in earnest regarding the riddance of her admirer.

That is precisely what Alice Cooper did last September, five weeks before Charles Northey died. She wrote to the superintendent of the Taunton insane asylum in Massachusetts and asked for work.

It was a natural line in which to put forth an effort. Work in the insane asylum in Augusta is eagerly sought by women finding the necessity for a means of support. Attendants in the asylum often go from one town to another.

Doubtless in her life Alice Cooper has had friends and acquaintances who have worked in various asylums. Perhaps she is not a woman of many resources. Her experience is narrow. Her husband has told her that Northey's attentions "did not look well" and that she better stop them. How do you and I know what we can say or do under such circumstances? Charley Northey may have been sufficiently and repeatedly insistent in his position. It may have been difficult for Alice Cooper, who had cared for him as one of her own family and treated him as such, to make him understand just what her feeling was for him and just where his place was.

NO WOMAN OF THE WORLD.

Women of the world who have encouraged a boy to admire and have grown tired may smile scornfully at the idea that the snubbing of the boy and the effectual dropping of him was hard.

But Alice Cooper is not a woman of the world. She is simple, unnatured, inclined to be tense and with a tender heart and a sensitive conscience. Yet she certainly did care enough for her husband to be willing to go away and work until Charley had made up his mind that his love was hopeless.

It seems on the face of it a willingness to break the attachment. It gives evidence of loyalty to her husband and a deference to his wishes. Situated in a different station in life Alice Cooper may have gone to Europe or South or West on a trip, leaving her whereabouts a mystery to the foolish boy. But, inasmuch as she was, the only way she could get away was by earning her living while she was away and this she was willing to do. Into whatever depths of folly Alice Cooper may have plunged in her friendship for Northey, one thing cannot be charged against her. That is the sin of idleness. If Edwin Cooper prospered and they say he did, I am convinced his wife was largely responsible.

With the care of five growing and active children, Alice Cooper added to the family income by taking boarders when the opportunity offered by driving children to and from school and by various other similar means. And with all her duties she found time to attend to church calls and to be ever ready to help in any social festivities for the pleasure or betterment of people.

MEANT WHAT HE SAID.

If Alice Cooper's neighbors had been half as busy as she was they wouldn't have had so much time to watch her and Charley Northey and gossip about them.

My reason for Edwin Cooper increased a thousandfold as I saw the flash in his eye and the determination of his chin when he said "No, sir!" in such ringing tones recently to Attorney Gleason Hamlin's question as to his suspicion regarding the propriety of the relationship existing between his wife and young Northey. There was no doubt as to his sincerity. There was no attempt at grand stand play. He meant what he said, and the flash in his eyes told that in his heart he wished he were not pinned to such a position that it was impossible for him to resent the implication of the interrogation.

Mrs. Cooper's face grew scarlet when her husband answered and her lip trembled, but she looked up at him with happy and grateful eyes, through a blur of tears.

When a woman is in trouble and distress, the target for vile insinuations and besmirching hints, it is good to feel that between her and the enemy stands one true soul who believes and trusts in her honor. And never in the world has a woman had a more loyal protector than Alice Cooper possesses in her husband.

NO TANGLED WEB.

Coming down the hill from the courthouse two men were walking. "He must be a fool to stand up for a woman that was running around with another fellow the way she was," said one contemptuously.

"He didn't see any harm in it," replied the other, "and I respect him for standing by her for now she has got into this mess. Lord knows who would if he didn't. They say he didn't see any harm." was the other's retort, "but he doesn't look blind."

"Edwin Cooper is telling the truth," was the reply. "Give him credit for that. I believe his story."

So do I believe Edwin Cooper's story. It is too straight to be anything but the truth. There is no tangled web. It is a plain, straightforward statement of facts. He treated the gossip about his wife and young Northey at the Moody wedding party as a joke. He said he saw nothing to be indignant about. And he stuck to it despite all efforts of the Attorney-General to make him recall some indignation.

He stated, however, that the whispering that never-to-be-forgotten Sunday at church disturbed him and displeased him. He makes no denial of the fact. He makes no secret about it on the way home. He said: "In my wildest days I never disturbed a meeting by talking." He says, however, that Charley Northey made most of the disturbance by talking out loud, at least, above a whisper.

HIS WORD LAW.

When the time came that he thought Charley Northey's visits should cease he did not hesitate to say so. From what I have seen of him during the trial I believe that when he gives his ultimatum it would be with a deal of decision. Edwin Cooper is not the kind of man to go coaxing and pleading. He would not stoop to such methods. He would not stoop to such methods. I imagine that in the every day affairs of life Alice Cooper ran things pretty much her own way, but I'll wager that when Edwin Cooper did assert himself he was obeyed and his word was the law.

That flash in his eyes and setting of his chin when he said he had no suspicions regarding his wife's fidelity gave me a deal of light on his character.

As they came into the corridor from the court room yesterday Mr. and Mrs. Cooper were joined by Velma and Lore, who had been waiting all day to go on the witness stand.

"Hello, mamma!" Hello, papa!" the children called as they went to them. Velma caught her mother's hand and Lore put one arm about her father. Edwin Cooper Sr., sad face lost a world of care and worry, was very much engaged with his grandchildren. She greeted them and patted them affectionately.

Ten years seemed suddenly taken from her appearance. She bowed and talked cheerily as she passed out into the sunshine. A careless group of men and women stood waiting to watch her pass. She did not heed them. Still smiling, she talked brightly to her husband, while Velma and Lore, happy to be again with their parents, danced along before them, going backward so as to face the mother in whom their confidence is secure and for whom their respect and love is unshaken.

DOWIE YIELDS; FIGHT FOR ZION WON BY VOLIVA

Aged "Prophet" Says All That He Now Wants Is a Living.

CHICAGO, April 12—John Alexander Dowie—Elijah III," and "Moses II"—has yielded. The fight for Zion is ended.

"I am satisfied if Zion's creditors get 100 cents on the dollar; all I want personally is a living," are Dowie's words in surrendering.

Broken in health, crushed in spirit, Dowie has succumbed to the more youthful and energetic Voliva. Faced by determined resistance in his own household, disarmed by the exposures already made and afraid to face them with sudden life and wife threaten him, the "apostle" abandoned his role of avenger, bowed to the inevitable and agreed to become an humble pensioner of his one time followers.

"He will get a living—a good living—but he will not be permitted to dwell in the luxury that has marked the past," said the youthful Voliva.

"I Want No Doctor."

Collapsing in the midst of the negotiations over Overseer Voliva's demands at the Auditorium Annex, Dowie lifted his head from his pillow and protested against the urging of personal attendants that they summon a physician.

"I want no doctor," said Dowie feebly. "I will have no physician. I shall ask Divine assistance for that is the only real help."

Then with a convulsive movement Dowie struggled from his bed and stumbled toward the centre of the room. He had gone but a few feet when he sank to his knees and muttered a prayer.

His attendants carried him back to bed again.

The deposed "First Apostle" had arisen from bed in the midst of a racking illness and then invoked heavenly aid in what may be his last struggle with adversity.

Dowie's attorney, Emil C. Wetten, had just returned from a conference with Voliva over Zion City, bringing with him the terms of capitulation.

Dowie, according to his attorney, is anxious to return to Mexico, where he hopes to spend the remaining days of his life.

Threats for the Unkissed.

Last evening Dowie had a wilder burst of wrath when he heard that his son had again attacked his private character and accused him of improper conduct. With every muscle of his figure quivering, he hurled reproaches at Gladstone Dowie.

"I hear that my son advises me to remember 1877," said the first apostle. "In that year, I regret exceedingly to say, God saw fit to bring into the world my son. That son is a degenerate cur. He is a liar and a thief. If my son Gladstone does not stop his malicious and cruel lies, I shall make revelations of his degeneracy and bestiality, which I can substantiate by reliable witnesses."

LOVED ANOTHER, SO DIVORCED OLDFIELD

DETROIT, April 12.—Mrs. Beatrice Oldfield, wife of Barney Oldfield, the automobile racer, was yesterday granted a divorce. Oldfield did not contest the suit. Letters were produced in which Barney said he had ceased to respect for his wife, but that he loved another woman better. The Oldfields were married in August, 1896, and lived together until December, 1904.

UNRAVEL QUEER FAMILY TANGLE IN FULLER CASE

Hawkins, Whom Ex-Harvard Man Accused of Blackmail, Arraigned.

The amazing tangle of the lives of Louis R. Fuller, former Harvard student, and rich society man, and the Fuller family connections, brought to light when Attorney Homer Hawkins, against whom Fuller had brought a charge of blackmail, was arraigned in Centre Street Police Court in New York to-day.

Young Fuller, who spent a year at Cambridge with the class of 1905, registering from Madison, N. J., is the adopted son of Dr. Frank Fuller, a millionaire. Hawkins, who is a theekeeper of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, proves to be a grandson of Dr. Fuller.

Hawkins's mother, Mrs. Alice Paxon, daughter of Dr. Fuller, was in court in the hope that she might secure forgiveness for her son. It is charged that Hawkins wrote to young Fuller demanding $500 and threatening to reveal the secret of Fuller's birth to his fiancee, Miss Rowlandson of Boston.

In court, with almost brutal abruptness, young Fuller found unfolded secrets which had been kept from him, and in fact from the world at large. It is declared that the woman who gave him birth is a woman who has been known as a dear friend for several years, but whom he did not know as his mother.

At the death of his first wife, Dr. Fuller married in Portsmouth, N. H., in the early '70's Miss Anna Thompson. She was a sister of the late Sarah A. Thompson, who was murdered on the night of September 1, just a few rooms in the St. James Hotel in New York. A son was born to Dr. and Mrs. Fuller, and the parents took the infant to Utah, where at one time Dr. Fuller served as Territorial Secretary. The child was named Frank. While on the Western trip the infant died and the grief-stricken parents brought the body to Portsmouth for burial.

A year passed, and there was received in the home of the Fuller's a three-months old baby boy. He filled the hearts of the recently bereaved parents.

The mother of Louis R. Fuller, who was a beautiful girl of sixteen at the time of his birth, was living with Dr. Fuller to keep the family secret. Although meeting her son not infrequently in a social way, she has never betrayed by word or look the fact that she is his mother. She is now living the mother of Louis R. ## FINAL FIGHT AGAINST SMOOT BEGUN TO-DAY

Carlisle Argues Against Mormon Before Senate Committee.

WASHINGTON, April 12. After hearings extending over three years, the inquiry into the right of Reed Smoot, Utah, as apostle of the Mormon Church, to hold his seat as a Senator from Utah, entered upon its final phase to-day. The concluding arguments of counsel began shortly after to-day before the senate committee on privileges and elections. The room was crowded with many prominently women.

Former Secretary of the Treasury John G. Carlisle, representing those protesting against Smoot's retention in the Senate, made the opening argument. He will be followed by Alfred A. Worthington, one of Smoot's counsel.

Mr. Carlisle said that the spiritual and temporal rulers of the Mormon Church were so interwoven that it was impossible to distinguish them, and that the people accepted all revelations as divine, whether they affected spiritual affairs or not. Marriage in this country, he said, was a civil institution. Yet the Mormons believed that the revelation regarding a man to take more than one wife was as binding on them as any revelation relating to spiritual matters.

He declared that it was merely a question of policy which induced the Mormon Church to abandon the practice of polygamy in order to facilitate the admission of Utah as a State.

He contended that the twelve apostles of the Church were a self-perpetuating body, with equal power with the President over temporal affairs.

CIVIL SERVICE BILL KILLED BY LOBBY HOLD-UP

State House and City Hall Again Unite and Waylay Every Senator.

The State House lobby rallied to the support of the City Hall lobby to defeat the Civil Service Arbitration Bill in the Massachusetts Senate, yesterday. And since the memorable afternoon when the Overtime Bill was defeated have the lobbyists' efforts been so open, energetic and successful.

Early in the day there was manifest activity on the part of "Bob" Southworth, the Boston & Maine lobbyist, who took charge of the Overtime Bill after the tex tile lobby had failed to defeat it. He and his lieutenants were scurrying through corridors and rooms during the entire forenoon and early afternoon.

When the Senate convened Southworth stood inside the room, on one side of the big entrance door. "Jack" Fleming, the lieutenant stood on the other side of the door. They thus caught every senator as he entered. To some of them they talked earnestly.

What they said caused how hard they worked. They appeared greatly pleased. Such a result as this, following their success with the Overtime Bill, may be expected to increase their prestige and to cement materially.

4 LOST AT SEA; 2 ARE RESCUED

Exhausted by more than two days with out food or water while they were tossed about helplessly in an open boat miles from land, two men were brought into Boston harbor yesterday on the steamer Bay State as guests of the Mormon Church. They came into his seat as a Senator from Utah, entered upon its final phase today. The concluding arguments of counsel began shortly after to-day before the committee on privileges and elections. The room was crowded with many prominently women.

COOPER ADVISED WIFE TO GO AWAY

"that your wife's relations had reached that point where you thought she would better go away?"

"Yes, sir," replied the husband.

Q.—Why did you think it better for your wife to go away? A.—I thought I'd rather do most anything to stop this in an easy way. It was on the neighbors account. I never thought there was anything wrong.

Mr. Heath offered in evidence the blank application received by Mrs. Cooper from the Taunton Insane Asylum. He also offered Mrs. Cooper's letter to the insane hospital, and the State, having withdrawn its objections, read it to the jury.

Fred Gleason of Augusta followed Mr. Cooper on the stand. He was called to refute the testimony of George Robbins, who said he left Mr. Gleason's employ last Summer and came to Cooper's Mills, where he saw Northey and Mrs. Cooper together. Mr. Gleason testified that Robbins did not work for him last Summer, but did work for him a year before. Two receipts signed by Robbins were put in evidence to show the dates Robbins quit work.

Frank Cooper, father of Edwin Cooper, was next called. He said:

"My wife and I went to my son Edwin's house on the day Charles Northey died. We ate dinner there. Mrs. Cooper, my daughter-in-law, waited on the table.

"After dinner I went over to the store and Charley Northey came along. I did not go into the house after that.

"Mr. Cooper said that he met the Morangs at Jewell's after he left his son's house.

Mrs. Eliza Cooper, Edwin Cooper's mother, was the next witness. She testified:

SAW NORTHEY COME IN.

"On the Saturday night before Charley Northey died I was at my son's house. His wife was not at home when I got there, but she came later. That evening we had a talk about getting a toy watch for little Ralph.

"I was at Leonard Cooper's over Sunday and started for Augusta Monday morning with my daughter Alma. We were in Augusta from 9 a. m. to about 4 p. m. We were bargain hunting all day.

"I saw Alice Cooper on the street in Augusta Monday. It was in the afternoon. I saw her twice. I spoke with her. We talked about the toy watch and I bought one. I saw Alice in a store on Water street. She was looking at dishes. She was the store before we did. She had some bundles.

"When we left Augusta we went to my daughter's home at Whitefield and the next day I went to see my son's house. We got there at 10:55 exactly. I looked at the clock as I went in. We had dinner there. Alice's dress was not torn.

"I saw Northey come in. He sat down by the table in the kitchen. I was reading."

Q.—Did you have some talk with Alice Cooper in the presence of Northey? A.—I did.

Q.—What was it?

The State objected and the court reserved its decision until after recess.

warded direct to the Italian consulate at No. 153 Milk street, Boston.

Rev. Father Roberto Biasotti, pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart, North square, has issued a personal appeal to the members of his congregation.

ALL NEW ENGLAND AIDS TO RELIEVE VOLCANO'S VICTIMS

All New England is rising to stricken Italy's call for help.

To-day influential Italians, many of whom had relatives or friends in the villages wiped out of existence by the eruptions of Mt. Vesuvius, are making arrangements to call their countrymen together in every city and have forwarded to the scenes of the disaster the much needed assistance.

Committees are being formed in ten cities to co-operate with the work of the National Committee, of which Roosevelt's fire William Randolph Hearst of New York is chairman. In most meeting these committees will appeal to their countrymen to help. By the response which has already been given the aid for the homeless will be prompt and generous.

Boston Italians Start With Vigor.

Boston Italians have taken hold of the work with a will. Others are held in readiness to be forwarded as soon as the committees have formally organized.

New York has risen nobly to the call. Within a short time there was placed at the disposal of Mr. Hearst's committee the sum of $5,200. More is on the way. Dispatches from Chicago and San Francisco announce that funds are being raised in those cities and that the work will be taken up with vigor and enthusiasm.

Providence has issued a call for a mass meeting to be held to-morrow night, where plans will be laid to have the city well represented in the generous bestowal of assistance. Fifteen representative business men have appealed to their countrymen to come forward and do what they can to help.

Similar Plans in Seven Cities.

The same plans are on foot in Manchester, N. H., Brockton, Portland, Me., Worcester, Lowell, Lynn and Somerville. From each of these will come the help that will swell the fund and make a mighty wave of relief for the homeless ones in the vicinity of Naples.

Councilman Joseph Santosuosso will preside at the conference of the committee of Boston Italians who will take up the work here. He has asked the other members of the committee to meet with him this morning.

At this conference they will lay plans to have a mass meeting called immediately to appoint sub-committees to go among the Italian residents of this city and appeal to them to help the cause and have some substitution named as the trustee of the fund which will be raised.

To Meet in Faneuil Hall.

Faneuil Hall will be the scene of the mass meeting. It is expected that it will be filled with the generous hearted sons of Italy, who are to-day eagerly scanning every line of news that comes from the scene of the disaster in an endeavor to learn whether or relatives or friends suffered or escaped in the awful shower that came from the great volcano and wiped whole towns out of existence.

"I shall take measure to co-operate with the movement of which Mr. Hearst is chairman," said Dr. Salvucci.

The first contribution to be received as a result of the appeal of the BOSTON AMERICAN came from the firm of P. Pastene & Co. Nos. 71 and 73 Fulton street. Their check for $100 formed the nucleus of a fund which is steadily increasing hour by hour. Such contributions as are received by the BOSTON AMERICAN will be placed at the disposal of the committee of such receiver as they may select.

WORCESTER ITALIANS TO CO-OPERATE WITH HEARST COMMITTEE

WORCESTER, April 12. When Joseph De Mecco, the Italian banker, whose office is at No. 120 Shrewsbury street, the best known Italian speaking person in this city, was informed by a BOSTON AMERICAN correspondent that William Randolph Hearst has been made chairman of the Italian relief fund, he was delighted. He said: "The Italians of New York show their appreciation of Mr. Hearst by naming the him as chairman of the committee to collect the money in this country. The people made destitute and homeless in the eruption of Mt. Vesuvius will appreciate the heartfelt indorsement of the local Italians, and we will succeed in our efforts in trying to make the collection well worthy of national attention."

There are some 3,000 Italians in this city, and there are three or four persons whose roll-call books contain only Italian names. The Christopher Columbus society is probably the largest order, and there are 150 names enrolled on the membership list. The president of the club is Joseph De Marco. Count Marzini, a foreigner in America, with a total membership of 175 Italian persons, is a powerful factor among the Italian colonists in this city. Michael De Pasquale of No. 11 Lenox street is chief ranger. The Savoia Society has an Italian membership of 125 persons, and Pilade Massei is the president.

A mass meeting of Italian speaking people of this city will be held in Forest ers' Hall, No. 112 Front street, on Monday evening, April 16, and action will be taken on the matter relating to the relief of the stricken citizens of Naples and surrounding towns. A permanent chairman will be chosen and a representative committee consisting of twenty-one members will be elected to receive subscriptions for the relief fund. Circulars pertaining to the matter will be mailed to every Italian in this city and all it is believed will add their mites to the cause. The money is to be forwarded to the BOSTON AMERICAN.

PROVIDENCE TO JOIN IN RELIEF OF VOLCANO SUFFERERS

Special to the Boston American.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., April 12—Aroused by the disaster caused by the eruption of Mt. Vesuvius, prominent Italians of this city to-day started a relief movement. Fifteen of them got together and issued a call for a mass meeting to be held in Providence Hall on Spruce street at 8 o'clock to-morrow night.

In the appeal which the committee has sent out they call attention to the fact that many of their have relatives and friends in the stricken district, that it is the time of need and that Providence Italians should rally to the assistance of the unfortunates and to that end will join with Randolph Hearst of New York.

Among the prominent Italians men who have signed the call are Vincenzo Buffalio, Pietro Bonaccorsi, Antonio Antonelli, Carmelo Cannella, Dominica Pettine and Anna R. Abdio. They will be joined by others and active solicitation at once will begin in the work of raising funds.

Many of the Italians at work, Thomas J. Barney, a prominent member of the Italian colony, has taken up on the work and will site his associates to action.

M. Vevvesa, the Italian Consul in this city, announced to-day that he would take active part in the work. He called to his family, who live ten miles from Vesuvius, in an endeavor to learn what fate had befallen them. He has received no word of the eruption started, and has fears that they may have been caught in the destruction of the villages.

LOWELL ITALIANS JOIN HEARST IN AID OF COUNTRYMEN

LOWELL, April 12. The Italians of Lowell are much pleased that an effort has begun to alleviate the suffering of their countrymen made homeless by the eruption of Mt. Vesuvius, and that the movement is to be headed by William Randolph Hearst.

A meeting of Italians will soon be called to take action in the matter. The Lowell relief committee will be under the leadership of Mr. Hearst consists of Ferdinando Do Nardo, president; Rev. Antonio Di Padova, pastor of the Italian church; G. Carpenito and Pietro Carabello, secretary.

PRIEST APPEALS FROM PULPIT FOR STRICKEN PEOPLE

An earnest appeal for contributions to the Italian relief fund to aid the victims of the Vesuvius eruptions and words of gratitude to the BOSTON AMERICAN for starting this fund were delivered from the pulpit by the Rev. Father Roberto Biasotti, rector of the Italian Church of the Sacred Heart, North square, at last night's services. Father Biasotti said:

"The anxiety among the Italians of this community for their own relatives or friends will only cease when we learn that no calamity has befallen our beloved ones. Yet I fear that there will be a sad ness in many homes.

"Since we have gained authentic knowledge that the eruptions of Mt. Vesuvius are considered by far the worst that we have had since the days of Pompeii, it behooves us at this critical time to render all the assistance in our power to the distressed families of the stricken towns.

"The movement begun by the Italians of New York was indeed a noble one, and I was overjoyed to learn to-day that those of our own colony in Boston had inaugurated a similar movement.

"I earnestly appeal for contributions for the benefit of the distressed families. Those who can contribute anything may remit their contributions to the BOSTON AMERICAN, whose publisher, Mr. Hearst, was among the first to aid the good causes we are undertaking.

"Mr. Hearst's act should be long and gratefully remembered by all the Italians of Boston, especially as Mr. Hearst is not of our nationality or creed.

"I know there are many who cannot contribute, yet who can offer a prayer for the thousands of families which have been rendered homeless."

CAST OF BODY OF BOY VICTIM OF VESUVIUS FOUND IN POMPEII.

This photograph shows a plaster cast made by pouring liquid plaster into the hole where the body was found. Most of the bodies reproduced in this way show that the Pompeiians perished while trying to avoid suffocation by the shower of fine superheated ashes that buried the famous ancient city on 79 A. D.

Sack Suits That Are Correct $25

English Shepherd plaids and soft grey tones are favorites in this spring's Derby Sack Suits for young men.

Correct taste still demands coats cut with deep vents. The vented coat insures a perfect fit and graceful lines at the hips. Side or centre vents are equally fashionable.

The smartest coat models are half form fitting, slightly flared at the side.

Trousers show a tendency toward more shapely legs and a less defined crease.

WHY STORAGE IMPROVES A PIANO

It is not generally known that a Big Storage Warehouse has the same kind of storage rooms for Pianos as do the Best Makers of the instruments. When a fine piano is made it is put into a special storage or seasoning room—a room especially built for the pianos, where the temperature is kept even and exact—the rooms of this kind are thoroughly felted so as to insure proper dryness. No moisture is generated in such a room to injure the delicate wires of the piano. A piano in Our Storage Rooms, which are built exactly like those of the finest makers, improves every day in seasoning and tone. Don't let any one prejudice you against a Storage Piano. It keeps better in Our Storage than in a parlor.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO PIANO DEALERS'

No pianos will be sold to dealers or makers for a less price than marked for public sale. Each piano is marked a selling price to cover expenses, and in no case can a maker or dealer get a lower price than an individual. This applies to a dealer's or manufacturer's own make or any other make.

Liberal terms to responsible parties. Get in early and select best bargains. Pianos shipped free to all parts of the United States.

Write to-day for full bargain list. We have dozens of fine Pianos not in above list, left over from special sales, etc. Some Pianos for bungalows, beach or country houses almost given away.

Free delivery anywhere in unmarked wagons; goods guaranteed as represented or money refunded; 1,000 rooms to let for storage, building so large; entrance will be where you see the red flag; sale positive all this week, open Sat. eve. till 9 p. m. ROXBURY STORAGE SALESROOMS, 725 Shawmut av., corner Williams st., Roxbury.

PIANO SLAUGHTER STORAGE SALE

A great many people are ignorant of the fact that the best possible opportunity to buy a piano at the lowest possible price is to get one at the Storage Sale. Sometimes the finest pianos that are made go almost for a song. Some pianos of the best makes that have been used only slightly, and at that in the best of homes, are sold for prices that seem impossibly low. New and second-hand pianos are sold regardless of price.

Pianos go for prices much lower than an auction would bring. There is no one to bid at a piano storage sale, the price is simply put on, first come, first served, and the careful, economical man or woman who wants to buy a piano economically, in fact more than economically, will watch the storage sales carefully.

The gilded piano stores with their costly appointments, their high salaried sales agents, their sellers' commissions, etc., are no place for the economical piano buyer to go. Take the trouble to look around a little, go up where the rents are not so high and buy your piano right.

Several nice upright pianos which must be sold at a sacrifice; 2 nice uprights, Chickering and Vose, $40 and $50; nearly new mahogany uprights, 3 pedals, latest style, at ¼ Boston prices; reason why, no large rents, big salaries or commissions to be paid; no fancy floors; our expenses about $5 a day; Boston warerooms' expense $300 to $500 daily; our terms the most liberal; free carting, free tuning and 8 months' lessons with each piano; why not see us at once and thus save the agents' enormous profits? SHAWMUT PIANO CO., 720A Shawmut av., Roxbury, Mass.; open till 9 P. M.

BRUNSWICK UPRIGHT, small size, just right for camp or seashore; good condition; $75. Why rent when you can buy at this figure? Others $100 to $150. BLAKE, 564 Washington st; established 1869.

AM OBLIGED to sell my Sohmer mahogany upright piano; is four years old, but in fine condition; cost $425 when purchased, but, being financially embarrassed, will sell for $175. G 254, Boston American.

NATIONAL LEAGUE BALL SEASON OPENS TO-DAY

FIVE STARS OF THE TENNEY FIRMAMENT, WHO BID FAIR TO SHINE THIS SEASON

Photographs taken by a BOSTON AMERICAN staff photographer in the South.

Tom Needham, catcher. Gene Goode, centre fielder. Fred Tenney, first baseman. "Little Cy" Young, pitcher. "Cozy" Dolan, right fielder.

Fred Tenney's Aggregation, Which He Believes Is Stronger Than It Has Been in Years, Will Play Its Initial Game in Brooklyn—Boston Team Possesses Much New Blood, Who Will Face Real Diamond Smoke for the First Time.

BIG baseball begins to-day. The National League season of 1906 will start the ball a-rolling with its eight clubs as follows:

Boston at Brooklyn,
New York at Philadelphia,
Pittsburg at St. Louis,
Chicago at Cincinnati.

The older organization will have a monopoly of things until Saturday, when the American League opens its championship season. Then, one by one, the various leagues, big and little, throughout the country will fall into line and by the end of the month the national game will be in full swing from Maine to California and from Minnesota to Louisiana.

Never was greater interest displayed in baseball than is manifested this year. Reports from all over the country say that all records for attendance will be broken. Managers have left no stone unturned to strengthen their teams, and the rivalry promises to be more keen than it ever was.

May the best teams win!

Tenney Says Men Are Fit.

BY FRED TENNEY.

BROOKLYN, April 12.—The Boston Nationals are in good shape and have done very well in practice. I am making no great predictions, but I think our men will make a better showing than last year. Things are certainly running better this season, and, with some clever young blood, we should satisfy the South End fans. We will do our best anyway.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

BROOKLYN, New York, April 12.—Primed for action, the Boston Nationals and the Brooklyn Trolley Dodgers are ready for the gong that will send them away on the big championship campaign of 1906. Though the tailenders in the last race, the teams presented a different allignment to-day and gave every indication of bettering their positions this season.

The Tennessites, fresh from a vigorous barnstorming trip in the sunny South, were well tuned up for the first pennant contest and counted on giving Patsey Donovan's youngsters a lot of trouble before the smoke cleared away.

Promising New Timber.

It was a promising group that Captain Tenney had in tow, as the new timber appeared in winning form and was anxious to make good from the outset.

The team has shown in the southern practice that its prospects look bright. The men have displayed brilliancy in fielding and had but few misplays chalked up against them in the ante-season games, which speaks well.

Another good omen is the stickwork, which has been consistent and gives evidence of developing as the season wears on.

Owing to the holding off of several of the regulars the team is not definitely picked as it will play throughout the year.

Although Batty has decided to stick to the hotel business in Latrobe, Pa., Catcher Tenney is not so badly off, as Bridwell and Brain and Strobel, a fine looking youngster, will make a diamond cluster with Captain Tenney that should keep a tight grip on the defence.

Bill Bridwell, who comes from Cincinnati, and played a good game with the Reds, and Dave Brain, ex-Cardinal, and later of the Pirates, are veterans that any team would be proud to have.

Infield Looks Strong.

Strobel got his education in the Hub, and is capable of holding his own at the third bag, and with Bridwell at short and Brain next second to steady him down, the first line of defence looks very well.

Only one regular remains in the outer garden, as Cozy Dolan is stationed at his old place in right, but the latest recruit, Gene Good, is one of the finds of the year, if his playing in practice is any criterion. He has been hitting like a streak, and being a Boston boy will increase his popularity by solid playing.

Charley Bates, the third outfielder, is likely to play with the team for a while unless Del Howard ousts him by better playing.

In the pitching department the Tenneyites hope to show more strength than a year ago. Fraser and "Little Cy" Young are the only ones left of the old bunch, and they were the best of the aggregation, with the exception of Vic Willis, who went to Pittsburg in a trade.

Lindaman of the Jersey City team and Pfeffer, the Chicago college pitcher, have shown their paces in the South and made good. McCarthy, a minor leaguer, will fill in.

Behind the bat Tom Needham is the mainstay, and is well supported by Jack O'Neil and Charley Brown.

The Bostons did not play at Newark yesterday, owing to wet grounds.

SCHAEFER TO CROSS CUES WITH CUTLER

NEW YORK, April 12.—In the big world's 18.2 billiard tourney at Madison Square Garden Sisson will play Morningstar this afternoon, and Jake Schaefer will encounter Bert Cutler to-night.

By the score of 800 to 382 Willie Hoppe of this city who holds the world's championship title for 18.1 billiards, defeated Albert G. Cutler of Boston in the fifth game.

When Jacob Schaefer of Chicago met Ora Morningstar fast work was looked for, and while the game ran through twenty-seven innings, Schaefer was not disappointing. He defeated Morningstar by a score of 500 to 235 and in doing so made 137 carooms in his seventh inning.

WALTHOUR IS NOW IN TOWN

Robbie Walthour, Tommy Hall and Gus Lawson arrived in this city last night from New York, at which point they landed from the Kron Prinz Wilhelm yesterday morning from Paris. Both Walthour and Hall were in first class condition, and Gus Lawson, the pacemaker of Walthour, looked as if the trip had agreed with him.

LAST EXHIBITION GAME FOR EX-CHAMPS TODAY

FOUR PLAYERS, MURCH, RISING, HUGHES AND KENNEY, BOOKED FOR THEIR RELEASE.

By Boston American Correspondent with the Team.

COLUMBUS, O., April 12.—Manager Jimmy Collins's Boston American team will play its last exhibition game, preparatory to the opening in New York Saturday, against the local team this afternoon.

Young, Tannehill and Selbach, who have been on home trips, joined the squad here to-day, and were ready to go into the game.

It is said that the recruits Hughes, Kenney, Murch and Rising will be given their releases to-day, or before the opening American League game, at any rate.

Collins will try to frame up a deal with Columbus to-day whereby he will let go Pitcher Ralph Glaze. Josslyn will probably be sent back to Providence.

Godwin will be retained by the team as utility man.

Collins says that Young and Paterson will be the battery in the first game against the Highlanders.

Myron Grimshaw will not get into the game to-day, as he has been given leave to visit his home at Buffalo.

It was a right fit for Jimmy Collins' Hub, pennant chasers to put it on the Colonels in yesterday afternoon's game, and it was not until the closing round that Boston received the verdict. The Louisvilles played with more ginger than has marked their performances in their previous games this year. The game ended 7 to 3 in favor of the Americans. Captain Collins sent Gibson to the slab for the first five innings and he made more than good, holding the Colonels down to two hits. He then assigned Harris to the twirling, but the enemy took more kindly to his stanis, sending out him for four hits.

For the Colonels, "Red" McCord was on the firing line and Stoner was the back stop. McCord was all there and then some. It is a fact that McCord has been a high-class pitcher for several years and under contract to Tebeau, but his fondness for the cooling beverage has retarded him in showing up to his true worth. He has abstained of late and to-day he would pitch rings around nearly any pitcher in the country. During the game Collins remarked to McCord: "Red, cut out the old stuff and you will go higher up next year."

Billy Hallman, who has been steaming at Hot Springs, made his first appearance this season and distinguished himself in his old position in the left garden.

Chick Stahl saved the game from being a tie at least by making a great catch in the ninth of Kerwin's long drive. A base on balls, McCord's error and Parent's single gave the Hostons a score in the first inning.

In the sixth safeties by Parent, Freeman and Grimshaw netted another run. In the ninth, after Freeman had put one out of Kerwin's reach in right field, Rising, who batted for Ferris at the finish, spilled the beans and won the game for Boston, after Freeman had put one out of Kerwin's reach in right field.

The Colonels' two scores came in the sixth. Captain Sullivan bit to right for a safety, Brashear followed with another drive to the same place and Quinlan put a nice one to centre, which netted the Kentuckians two runs.

HIGGINS CAN'T PLAY AT VERMONT

BURLINGTON, Vt., April 12.—The faculty of the University of Vermont has definitely decided that "Bill" Higgins, former captain of the Brown University nine, cannot play with the Vermont team. They base their decision on the grounds that he is a professional, now being under contract to play Summer ball, and that he did not register in the medical department here in time to be eligible for the team. This decision by the faculty has caused intense dissatisfaction among the students and alumni, the latter having held several meetings and adopted resolutions urging the faculty to let Higgins play.

REYNOLDS VS. KLUCKEN.

Campbell was the victor in the match played in the New England Class C amateur billiard championship tournament at the Hub Billiard Palace, Smith going down in defeat by twenty-three points. He score being 150 to 127. The victor averaged 3 1-37 and made a high run of 25, while Smith's average was 1 64-75, with a high run of 11. Reynolds and Klucken will cross cues this evening.

MATHEWSON ILL CAN'T PLAY FOR SOME TIME

NEW YORK, April 12.—Word was received from Plainfield, N. J., to-day that Christy Mathewson, the Giants' twirler, is laid up in bed suffering from a severe cold and nasal diphtheria. Dr. F. D. Cregar, his brother-in-law, says that Matty will not be able to go out for a week at least.

This will be sad news for the rooters of the champions, as Matty is incomparable. However, McGraw, the manager of the Giants, is always prepared for an emergency of this kind and will fall back on some other of his staff of twirlers, all of whom are in good condition. Christy was the most unfortunate member of the team on the training trip, being laid up for some time from the same cause.

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL.

There will be a meeting of those interested in association football next Saturday night at 8 o'clock at the Continental Hotel, Essex street. The object of the meeting is to organize for the ensuing year, appoint committees and generally do all the business that may properly come before the meeting.

JERRY GAINES WILL HAVE HARD BOUT

Charley McKeever was never so confident of victory as he is in the bout with Henry Mellody next Monday night at the Lincoln A. C. He has had time to get in condition and feels now that he can really outpoint the Bunker Hill boy. If he can win he will get the match with Dougherty in Milwaukee instead of Mellody, and it's a big object to strive for.

That McKeever is cleverer and speedier than Mellody was proved in their last contest, and he expects to get away from Mellody's crashing break-up hitting that he depends on to win for him.

The man who has been picked to whip Jerry Gaines seems very liable to do the trick. Al Mitchell, the Waltham boy who will face Gaines, has won eleven straight battles, all by the knockout route. This record equals the one of Gaines and makes the contest appear a very even one.

AUTO RECORD BROKEN.

ATLANTIC BEACH, Fla., April 12. A new track record was broken in the races on the Atlantic Beach. J. Lansberry 50-horse power Peerless, driven by Davison, won the five-mile Florida championship in 6m. 8s., an average of 1 01 3 5.

PRESIDENT SODEN SAYS YOUNG BLOOD WILL TELL

President Soden of the Boston National team will not go over to Brooklyn to-day to witness the opening of the season, as business keeps him in the Hub.

"I expect to see the team do better this year," said Mr. Soden. "The new young players on the team will have an incentive to play the best ball they know how, and if it is in them it will surely come out.

"The trouble last year was the presence of some old players who "soldered" a bit, which is not likely to happen this year. There are ambitious players on the team now, and their dispositions will assert itself.

Hasn't Seen Team Play.

"Many people have stopped me and asked what I thought of the team this year, but I have been unable to say much, not having seen the team play. All I have learned has been through the reports that have come through the press.

"While at this present it is uncertain regarding the capabilities of the team, I think there is some encouragement from the way the men have taken hold.

"Captain Tenney wrote me that Howard hurt his ankle in practice, but will be around in a few days, and O'Neil had a split finger, which would keep him out of the game for a week. Raymer is expected to report with the team shortly. He was way out in California with his wife, whose illness has kept him from joining the team. Abbatechio we have not heard from and I don't know what he intends doing.

Fraser Is Holding Out.

"Fraser is holding off for a raise in salary, but I wrote him that he would have to accept the same as he got last year. Breseler, the pitcher, is under reserve to us, but he will probably not play this year unless it is with the outlaws. We drafted him from Lowell a couple of years ago, but he returned what advance money we gave him.

"By the time the team opens up the season in Boston on April 26 we will know better what improvement there is. The South End grounds have been fixed up for the inaugural and new bleachers put in back of first base."

O'BRIEN AND FITZ TALK FIGHT AGAIN

NEW YORK, April 12.—There was some excitement about the Metropole Hotel when it was learned that Bob Fitzsimmons, Jack O'Brien, Tom O'Rourke, George Considine and three other stalwart individuals were seated about a big round table, making simple remarks, but looking very wise. They sat perfectly still, save when they ordered rounds at the shining tile of Ruby Bob, the great discomfiture of the latter, but it was easy to see that all were bent on thinking something out.

"What's doing?" asked the American's man.

"Nothing yet, but we're trying hard," said the immaculate O'Rourke.

"Well, I'll tell you how it is," said O'Brien. "Fitz here and myself are trying to arrange another fight. I am perfectly willing to give him another chance against me, but I think I am entitled to the big end of the purse, as I beat him.

"You see, I am champion now, and I wouldn't want to establish a bad precedent by not risking everything I can get in the way of money.

"Of course, Fitz wants to fight me before the Tuxedo Club in a month or so and wants the mill to be for twenty rounds. I have just had a long theatrical tour and will want a good rest and then time to train before I would make such a match with Fitz. You see for myself how fine he looks. (Here Fitz winked several times.) He has the complexion of a babe. He has been kneeking around for several weeks doing nothing but taking a little exercise with the punching bag.

"Now I am manager of Jack O'Brien, and I would not consent to allow him to meet such a robust youth without ample preparation. I am willing to meet him in a short bout in this city and have a good offer for one in Philadelphia, but Fitz is holding out.

"I am willing to offer these offers at once, but Fitz is holding out."

At this point a deftly thrown napkin sent Fitz's hat rolling to the floor, and the ex-champion was too much concerned to say something for himself.

"Fitz has explained to me," continued O'Brien, "that he was not himself when I got the best of him. Domestic trouble has caused him many sleepless nights and he was unable to get in good shape."

"That's right, and it was a lucky thing for you, too," chimed in Fitz in a cheerful voice.

"Well, that's how it stands," said O'Brien.

"Come, boys, six per cent. of the gross receipts," said O'Rourke.

"He writes his own monologues," said Fitz, pointing a long forefinger at O'Brien. O'Rourke sighed and touched the button.

The Haunting Shadow Of His Murdered Wife

Synopsis

"ROSAMUND," the man muttered to himself.

As the crowd poured out of a Broadway theatre John March saw for the first time four years the woman to whom he had given his love—Rosamund Wynter, the daughter of a millionaire. Poor and unsuccessful, March could not ask this daughter of luxury to become his wife.

He became desperate, forsook his friends, dropped out of her life and sank lower and lower, till he found himself dragging out a sordid existence as the husband of a woman known to all the world as Zingara, the dancer.

Sick and disgusted, March made his way to the home he detested and had left a few days before, after an angry discussion with his wife.

From a paper, carelessly thrown on a table, he learned that he had become heir to an enormous fortune by the sudden and accidental death of his uncle and nephews.

In haste he searched the flat for his wife, whom he was curious to find and learn how such news would affect her.

On the threshold of her bedroom door he stood aghast and by the dim light of a match he saw the body of his wife on the floor with a dagger at her side.

Pity, sorrow and shame took the place of the resentment in his heart toward her, but he realized that he must make his escape before any one should come and have a chance to suspect him of such a deed.

He quickly destroyed everything that might lead to the discovery of his real name, John Herries, or his identity, and was about to take his departure as silently as he came. But sounds of voices reached his ears and clamorings of Zingara's guests at the door told him he could not leave that way.

His one chance of life and liberty was by the fire escape, and take that chance he must.

He climed out and down one fight, to be met by the frightened glance of a woman's eyes, from the window of the apartment below.

They were the eyes of Olga Vail, who lived there with her sister, Freda. March threw himself on her mercy. Terrified at his mysterious appearance, but believing his impassioned plea to remember him always as an innocent man, she allowed him to escape, even as the cries of those who discovered the murder rang through the house.

On the floor Olga Vail found a pocketbook. Its contents told her John March was John Herries, millionaire. She threw it in the fire.

The scene changed. John Herries, millionaire, and Rosamund, fairest of the fair, found themselves together on the veranda of the home of Robert Wynter on a glorious Summer evening.

CHAPTER IV.—Continued

On Dangerous Ground

"OF course I was sorry," she said, "sorry, and a little hurt, too, perhaps, that my old chum should go away without even a good-bye; should let us utterly lose sight of him. Why did you do it, Jack?"

"But you know why," he answered. "You knew what a reckless fool I'd been, and when my horse came in fourth in the Brooklyn Handicap I was a ruined man. If the beast had won, everything would have been different. Heavens, how different!" he added to himself.

As he spoke a sudden mental picture had risen up before him, and his eyes as they rested on that peaceful garden saw not the roses, nodding drowsily as though half-asleep, steeped in the glow of the red sunset—they saw the race track with its concourse of people, and in his ears, almost as vivid as on that afternoon four years ago, were the excited shouts of the crowd, the cries of the bookmakers, the beat of the horses' hoofs.

A race was being run and his horse was in the race, carrying his fate in its heels—the race on which everything had hung for him. To win it was the one thing that could save him, could enable him to ask Rosamund to be his wife. And the horse had come in fourth.

"Is money everything?" and there was a little flicker of scorn about the girl's mouth. "Is it not, rather, a very little thing compared with friendship? Because you had lost your money, did you think so meanly of us, your friends, as to believe it would make any difference in our feelings toward you?" she demanded.

"I never thought that of you, Rosamund. You knew I could not think it. It was not that I had lost everything that I effaced myself," he said in a low voice.

One Woman to Fear

Should he tell her now what that other reason was? Tell her that he had feared to stay by her side lest his love should prove stronger than his honor—lest he spoke of love when he had no right?

Had he a right now? He put the question to himself as he stood by her side in this old garden "full of the sunset and silence," his senses swayed by the intoxicating sweetness of her presence.

If only he could have been sure that his connection with the John March for whom the police were making inquiries would never come to light! If only he had never seen the moving shadows of New York!

Since the man known as John March had not come forward upon the news of his wife's fate, there had been a growing tendency to suspect him.

It was clear from the news in the papers that the woman who had saved him, Olga Vail, had not informed the police of his presence at the flat that night.

She had kept silence, and he felt a debt of gratitude to her for that. He wondered sometimes what she thought—whether she believed him to have been guilty.

So far it was only surmise, aroused by his suspicious absence and the known bad terms on which he had lived with his wife.

There was no proof. But had Olga Vail chosen to break silence the information she could have given of John March's movements on that fatal night would have looked like absolute proof.

But surely now he had nothing to fear. The case would die out in the public mind and be forgotten. Who would ever dream of associating the murdered woman's husband with John Herries?

He suddenly squared his shoulders with a little gesture, as though he were freeing himself of some load they bore.

"I'm glad I came back, Rosamund," he whispered. "I wonder if you know how glad."

But her head was suddenly bent very low. The color in her cheeks had deepened. She did not speak, but a breath of wind rustling through the rose bushes filled in the pause. She was standing by the moss-grown sundial, one smooth bare arm resting on its brass face. The quaintly lettered motto stood out plain:

"Time past—Time to come," he read aloud.

He felt somehow that the inscription carried a meaning for his own life.

Across the sundial their faces almost met. The wrap had fallen away from her hair—soft hair of dusky brown, except where the last gleams of the sun fell on it and turned it into flame—whose fragrant masses brushed his cheek, bringing fond memories—hair powdered with scented leaves from the wind stirred branches that had rained down a soft carpet of petals, crimson and yellow and white, for her small bronze-slippered feet to tread on.

The Summer night must have had magic in it that played tricks with his senses; something seemed to catch at his heart and stop its beating.

"But you haven't said a word about my roses; you have hardly looked at them," Rosamund said, looking down at the sundial.

Police Trailing Him.

"I'll look at the roses—when I can take my eyes off you!" he cried in a low voice.

He saw her cheeks flame suddenly scarlet; a madness seemed to tingle in every vein.

"Rosamund," he whispered, something catching at his breath and leaving his voice scarcely under his control, as he took her hand in his. "Rosamund, I haven't spoken of those four years I've left behind me forever—years how bitter and hopeless you cannot guess—but through them I used to dream that beyond the wilderness where my feet were set there was one welcome waiting for me, even though I might never be able to come back to claim it. Was I right, Rosamund? Dear, I want——"

The passionate words that trembled on his lips remained unsaid, interrupted by the sound of voices on the other side of the hedge of wild roses.

"Here's the boy with my evening paper at last!" Robert Wynter was saying to Haggard, as the lad appeared up the drive. "You're late to-night, aren't you, my lad?"

Herries stood holding her hand a prisoner—what a little white, soft hand it was; he could feel it trembling in his own—waiting till the two men should pass on.

He had not meant to tell Rosamund to-night that he loved her, only something in him stronger than himself had forced him to speak. A mad exultation thrilled him. Surely Rosamund guessed, surely she was glad he was about to speak.

From the other side of the hedge he heard Philip Haggard's voice, as he glanced at the late news in the evening paper, and the first words startled Herries from his thoughts.

"Here's some fresh news, I see, in the paper about the murder of that dancing girl, Zingara!" Haggard exclaimed. "The police believe they are at last on the track of the missing husband and an arrest——"

The remaining words of Haggard's sentence were lost as the two men moved away.

Herries's face had suddenly grown ashen pale. With a long, shivering breath he dropped Rosamund's hand.

Those impassionate words that an instant ago were on his lips, how could he speak them now?—with the police on the track of John March!

CHAPTER V.

A Woman in the Case

THE words were still ringing in Herries's ears as Mr. Wynter and the junior partner emerged into view around the corner of one of the trim hedges.

Under other circumstances John Herries would have been impatient of this intrusion, which no doubt had been deliberate on Haggard's part, but now that ominous sentence from the newspaper, "the police are on the track of the missing husband," had laid a seal on his lips, forbidding him to speak of love to Rosamund while the menace of the past threatened his future. The interruption was almost a relief.

"I hope you haven't come to talk about newspaper horrors, dad," Rosamund said lightly, going up to her father.

He laughed.

"Oh, you heard Mr. Haggard reading the paragraph about that terrible Zingara affair," he said. "It seems the police have at last made an arrest."

TO BE CONTINUED.

"I'll look at the roses—when I can take my eyes off you!" he cried in a low voice. He saw her cheeks flame suddenly scarlet; a madness seemed to tingle in every vein.

Love's Difficulties Are Often Easily Smoothed by Time

By Beatrice Fairfax

IF human love were the growth of human will, what a well-ordered, prosaic old world this would be, to be sure.

We would all fall in love with the right person, at the right place, at the right time. Instead of which we frequently fall head over heels in love with the wrong person at the wrong place and at the wrong time.

There is only one way to keep from falling in love, and that is to run away from it.

It is no use to stay near love and think you can shut your ears and heart to his clamor.

You can't do it, for he will whisper in your ear and beat on your heart until you have no longer the power or will to keep him out.

It is all very well to say to the man or girl in love, "Don't fall in love; you have no right to." The obvious answer would be: "But I have fallen in love—what can I do about it?"

Someone must suffer; it must be the man, the girl, or both, or the duty for which either one stands is responsible.

And this brings us back to the first argument, viz: that if a man cannot afford to fall in love he must run away from temptation.

In nine cases out of ten the man who cannot afford to fall in love is young.

He can afford to wait, though telling him so will not comfort him much, as nothing is so impatient as youth, unless it be love.

Nevertheless, he can well afford to wait a few years, and if he is sure of his love and hers he can ask her to wait with him.

And if their love does not stand the test of a two or three-years' engagement they may rest assured it would not stand the test of matrimony.

The world is full of men and women who have had to sacrifice love to duty—women who have felt that their home ties had a stronger claim on them than love; men on whom the responsibility of the home rested too heavily for them to dare think of love.

And yet these men and women are fairly happy. They are doing their life work cheerfully, uncomplainingly.

Hardly a day passes but that I receive a letter imploring advice on this subject.

Girls write that they are in love, and would like to be married, but that they are taking care of the home and do not see how they can leave it.

Men write that they have fallen in love and are anxious to marry, but that they are the sole support of their mothers and sisters, and cannot afford to support two families.

I would give anything in the world to be able to say to these young people, "Go on, be married; love is the most important thing in the world—be true to it," but I can't.

I can't tell them to turn their backs on the mothers who have sacrificed everything in the world for them.

After a man is married his first duty is to his wife, but before he marries his first duty is to his mother.

And so all I can say to them is "Wait."

Time does wonders toward smoothing out love's difficulties.

If a man puts his heart and soul into his work success is bound to come to him.

If he lives wisely he can save money.

The girl can do her share by encouraging him and not demanding too much of his time.

She must not expect him to spend all his spare moments with her, for if his mind is too much occupied with her he won't do good work.

It isn't easy for either of them, for naturally, loving each other, they want to be together.

They will have to be satisfied with the knowledge that their love exists, and wait patiently until such time as good fortune smiles on them.

Advice to Anxious Sweethearts

By Beatrice Fairfax

FIND OUT THE TRUTH

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am deeply in love with a young man whom I would die for.

People say he is married, but he tells me that he lives with his sisters and is not married. He is a very attractive young man and dresses very neatly. He is also quite a comedian. I don't seem to care for any other man, although I have quite a few admirers. I would like to know how to ascertain whether he is really married or not. He calls on me once or twice a week, but has never taken me out.

FLORENCE.

YOU must make some effort to find out the true state of affairs. Tell him you would like to meet his sisters. If he refuses to allow you to meet them there must be something wrong. Do not grow too fond of him until you find out. You cannot be too particular in finding out all about him.

SHOULD KNOW HER MIND

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young woman, and had been keeping company with a middle-aged man of means, who told me he loved me, and would marry me. I did not think I cared for him then, and slighted him; so he ceased his visits. Since then I have learned to think more of him, and I know I love him, but, alas! he does not visit me any more. Would you advise me what to do?

K.

IT is too bad you did not realize that you loved him when he was on hand. The only thing you can do it make yourself very pleasant the next time you meet and perhaps that will stir up his interest. A man won't stand being slighted more than a certain length of time, you know.

Women No Longer Denounce Tipping

FIVE years ago, if you asked a woman what she thought of the tipping system, ten to one she would be eloquent in denouncing it as an abuse of personal freedom and a pernicious practice that men were afraid to protest against in an organized way. She attributed its prevalence entirely to the latter cause, for at that time she had a lot to say about the weakness of men and the superiority of women.

In fact, she was so busy with her women's clubs and her stagless teas and luncheons and her woman's suffrage meetings that she had no time to right things. Of course, she tipped, but she explained it on the ground that, being new to the business of running the universe, she had to take over a few of the old ills until she had time to readjust matters.

Have Changed Minds

To-day, when you ask women what they think of tipping, you will find that their tune has changed completely. In a long inquiry conducted among women of all sorts and conditions, not one was found who objected to the general system of tipping.

There were many protests against tips, but they were all based on some special grievance rather than the general idea.

Servants have a great deal of the child in them, as we all have, and it is a notorious fact that the average child values his relatives for what they give him.

In England the piece of silver that the visiting uncle presents to his nephew or niece is always spoken of as a tip, and you will hear English children ask each other, "Did he," meaning the departing relative, "give you a tip?" and if he didn't he is not welcomed in that household.

Servants are just like children, and if you remember that, why you get along with them all right.

I know of two young women artists who were invited to spend a week end recently at a country house, and although invitations there are eagerly sought, they found after adding up railroad fares and tips that the amount of money could be expended in town with much more enjoyment, and so they declined.

It was simply that their business faculties were developed to the extent that they wanted their money's worth of fun, and strenuously objected to paying other people's servants.

Unsolicited Attention

A short time ago, travelling in a drawing room car, I witnessed the active distress of a young couple who were at the mercy of one of the porters. They had been married about ten minutes before they boarded the car, and they sat down blushing and conscious. Every once in a while when one or the other turned a few grains of rice would drop from some of his or her clothing.

Each time it happened the porter would appear with a brush and a dustpan and sweep up the unoffending particles, and each time the bridegroom would make a pass and the porter would go away with his mouth looking like that of the Amazon River, which is, I believe, the largest one known to geographers.

This happened five times, and then I lost count. The last I saw of the bride and bridegroom they were turning round while the porter was searching for more rice and making them think he had rescued them from a living death of humiliation.

How to Detect Adulterated Food

WITH the alarming increase in every manner of food adulteration, it becomes the housewife to be on her guard against substitutes and harmful ingredients. The following simple home tests may be of service to the careful housekeeper.

To Tell Good Milk

The average quality of the milk supply can be easily determined by simply dipping a cup into a well-stirred-up can of milk. Real milk of any degree of body will cling to the glass, leaving its sides white and oily. Diluted milk looks blue about the edge and leaves the glass almost clean.

How to Test Eggs

Candling eggs is still the most common method among marketmen for determining their freshness. An old picture in the Dresden gallery shows a Dutch housewife holding up her eggs to the light, just as my lady of to-day may do. The work is best done in a darkened room, each egg being held before a lighted lamp or candle.

If a perfect ball of rosy red is found floating in clear liquid in a clean shell, the egg is perfectly fresh. If there is a slight vacuum at one end, it is fresh enough for cake-making, scrambling, etc., but when the yoke sticks to the shell decomposition has set in and it is not fit for food.

When buying at the market, select eggs whose shells are rough. A smooth, glossy shell is the sign manual of too long residence in the nest.

Easy Vinegar Test

Place a sample of the vinegar in a shallow dish on the stove and heat until evaporation takes place. If the vinegar is made from cider the odor of apples can readily be distinguished. If from wine, the evaporating vinegar will give out the odor of wine, but if from sugar house wastes or wood products colored with caramel, the smell of burnt sugar will make itself unpleasantly evident.

Simple Coffee Test

A suspected sample of ground coffee may be detected in either of the following ways: First, if the coffee hardens or cakes when placed between the fingers, it is adulterated, probably with chicory.

Second, place a teaspoonful of the coffee on top of the water in a wine glass. If any part floats and part sinks it is safe to say it is adulterated.

Third, place a spoonful of the ground coffee in a clear glass bottle of cold water and shake thoroughly for a few minutes. If the coffee is pure it will rise to the surface, scarcely coloring the water. If adulterated, it will sink and discolor the water. The reason is that pure coffee is enveloped in an oily substance, which prevents the grounds from absorbing the water, while the adulterant, free from oil, soon becomes saturated.

To Tell Pure Oil

In buying olive oil, American or imported, it must be remembered that the pure article is not cheap, the California oil being even higher than the imported. Good olive oil should taste of the olive.

A test for pure olive oil is to place some in a bottle and immerse in a pan of chopped ice for several hours. If adulterated it will come out as clear and limpid as when it went in.

The pure oil, like the attar of rose, will have broken up into little whitish grains, which seem to be held in solution. Pure olive oil grows rancid more quickly than the adulterated, so that it is never wise to purchase in very large quantities.

Although cottonseed oil is harmless, it has a disagreeable taste, leaving a suggestion of lard in the mouth.

CHAPTER XXIX.

The North Pole City

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner.

THE next few days were filled with wonder for Jack.

He soon discovered that he was regarded as a great and marvellous curiosity.

He was taken daily to a sort of museum, where people came in crowds to see him.

They were curious people, not at all like he imagined the residents of the polar regions.

Instead of being short and squat, like the Eskimos, they were tall and fair, with fine, handsome faces and the look of educated, refined people.

Their curiosity was not rude, and the old man in charge of the museum allowed none of them to talk to him.

The idea of being on exhibition, however, was naturally distasteful to Jack, and he soon learned enough of the language to request his captors for a little more privacy.

His request was instantly obeyed.

Thereafter the public exhibitions were stopped. A tutor was appointed to instruct him in the polar tongue, and when he had become a little more proficient in it the elders of the community spent two hours each day questioning him concerning the land from which he had come and the whole civilized world, of which they apparently knew nothing.

On the fourth day of his captivity he heard a sound of a great multitude outside the room where he was lodged and asked the reason for it.

"They are putting to death the man they captured with you," was what he understood the old man who had charge of him to reply.

Jack looked out of the window and beheld a curious spectacle.

The street was filled with a great mob of people, all of whom were shouting at the top of their voices.

At the head of a sort of straggling procession that had been formed walked Hunston, held securely by two tall men.

Behind him marched a person who was evidently the executioner, for he was armed with a long spear.

Suddenly the procession stopped.

The executioner took one step forward and levelled his spear.

Hunston, with set, white face, awaited him.

Just then a shout was heard from a little distance, and Anderson dashed breathlessly to the centre of the group.

He was accompanied by two men, who Jack saw to his astonishment were Kodlo and Larsen.

Larsen immediately began to address the multitude in their own language, and in a few minutes they were bowing to him.

The executioner stopped in his tracks and lowered his spear.

Just then he caught sight of Jack's face at the window, and raised his hand slowly to call attention to it.

Instantly there was a yell, and the crowd began to rush toward the house where Jack was held a prisoner, while Hunston, suddenly finding himself free, made off at the top of his speed through the crowd.

SURE CURE FOR DOUBLE CHIN

THERE is scarcely anyone who retains the contour of the lower part of the face after the age of thirty. Either the under jaw becomes thin or the dreaded double chin arrives, and both could be prevented if a few precautions were taken against the tendency of nature to play tricks with this part.

The correct treatment for the lower part of the face is to rest the face in the palms of both hands, with the fingers resting on the temples; the thumbs will then be along the jawbone and the cheek will rest against the full flat of the hand. In this position knead the face gently, always bearing in mind the "lifting" process of the flesh on the face. The same treatment applies for the double chin and the emaciated face. As many people will doubt this statement, it is best explained that either condition has been brought about by sluggish circulation, and this results sometimes in an insufficient and sometimes in a superfluous deposit of fatty tissue. Therefore massage, which equalizes matters, repairs the wrong in both cases. It builds up wasted tissues and causes to be absorbed any unhealthy deposit of fat.

Of course a good skin food must be used throughout these exercises, and all creams that have animal or mineral fats encourage the growth of hair, so must be avoided. In buying cream it will be found the dearest of economies to buy the cheaper.

HAIR on a WOMAN'S FACE

By an improved method of electrolysis we remove for all time hair growing on the face. There is nothing that we know of so humiliating and embarrassing as this form of blemish. For 36 years we have devoted our time studying how to do this work better than any one else, until now we have a perfect system under control of perfect operators. If you have hair on the face, come and have it removed forever.

HOW I SAILED 60 MILES IN BALLOON

BY MRS. JULIAN P. THOMAS

Not At All Frightened, and Is Now Anxious to Repeat the Experiment.

Daring Woman Says Flight in the Heavens Was Delightful Experience.

Special to the Boston American.

PITTSFIELD, April 12.—To Mrs. Julian P. Thomas of No. 172 West Seventy-second street, New York, wife of Dr. Julian P. Thomas, New York physician and columnist, belongs the credit of being the first American society woman to make a successful flight in a balloon in this country. Mrs. Thomas sailed above the clouds from Pittsfield to Somers, Ct., a distance of sixty miles as the crow flies.

Among the cheers of 2,500 persons, who waved handkerchiefs, hats and umbrellas, Mrs. Thomas, accompanied by her husband and Charles Levee, the famous French aeronaut, left Pittsfield at 3:25 o'clock and reached Somers at 6:15 o'clock. The finish was made on Pinney's Farm, in the outskirts of Somers.

Kept Her Promise.

Loyal to her promise not to back out, Mrs. Thomas stepped into the basket attached to L'Oiseau, the balloon owned by Count de la Vaulx, as if it were an every-day occurrence instead of her initial trip above the clouds. She showed no sign of nervousness and continually smiled at people in the crowd. As the balloon started she threw over the side of the basket many bouquets of English violets, fastened with a purple silk cord.

One of the most interested spectators was her seven-year-old son, Odin A. Thomas. The youngster closely watched every movement of the aeronauts in their preparations. Just before leaving Mrs. Thomas called Odin to the side of the basket and kissed him affectionately several times.

Mrs. Thomas's Own Story.

After leaving the balloon Mrs. Thomas gave this account of her experiences:

"It was one of the most delightful sensations I ever experienced, and I am anxious to repeat the feat.

"Shortly after cutting loose from our moorings we passed into a cloud and everything was cut off from view.

"At first there was a terrible roaring sound, and for a time we thought it was rain, and then it changed and seemed to be like wind blowing through the tree tops.

"Shortly the earth appeared in our vision and we were headed directly for a great hill and it seemed that we must certainly land there, but my husband and Mr. Levee threw out ballast in a shower, and we shot up to a distance, which Mr. Levee declared to be about 3,000 feet.

Photograph by a Boston American Staff Photographer.

DR. AND MRS. THOMAS READY FOR AIR TRIP.

"We remained up there a long, long time, or at least it seemed so to us, for we had apparently lost all calculation as to time and location, and we could see nothing or hear nothing except our own conversation.

Went Up 5,000 Feet.

"We descended after a while to an altitude which the gentlemen declared to be about 1,000 feet, and then we could see the earth. The conditions seemed to be very favorable indeed, and then it was decided to see how high we could go, and the balloon shot up to a height of 5,000 feet and the ascent was admirable and greatly delighted me.

"We stayed up there for a long time and inasmuch as we knew nothing as to where we were or how far away the sea was we determined to descend, which we did gradually until we passed over this city.

"About the time we passed over Spring field city we commenced to descend in spite of ourselves, and very shortly the ropes were dragging along the treetops.

Liked Bumping Along Treetops.

"At this point Dr. Thomas made me cover my face to prevent any possible injury, but I was not the slightest bit frightened, and the sensation as we bumped along from tree to tree was delightful, but beyond explanation.

"Finally our anchor caught in the top of a great tree and we alighted from the car without the slightest mishap and the sensation of again being back on old Mother Earth was good, to be sure.

"In going up we were a great way up in the air before we hardly knew it, and throughout the ascent we were conversing constantly.

"To me, personally there was not the slightest hint of peril connected with the entire flight, although I do not know how the doctor and Mr. Levee felt about it, and I do not think they were at all alarmed.

"We shall start for California shortly, but I am anxiously awaiting the time when I can again make a flight from Pittsfield, which I trust may be as early as June."

The ascension was one of the prettiest ever seen in this country. Instead of leaving the earth like a skyrocket, as is generally the case, the mammoth balloon slowly and gracefully rose to a height of 200 feet and for a fraction of a second remained stationary. Levee threw out a few bags of ballast and the big silk bag shot upward and started in a southeasterly direction.

The balloon rose to a height of 2,000 feet and gradually worked its way over Washington Mountain, at the Hoosac Range of the Berkshires, and disappeared from view into the clouds.

EMPEROR, IN OLD CUSTOM, HUMBLES SELF

Washes Feet of 12 Oldest Poor Men in Vienna, Then Gives Royal Banquet.

VIENNA, April 12.—Emperor Francis Joseph in accordance with the time-honored Maundy Thursday custom, today performed the annual ceremony of washing the feet of the twelve oldest poor men of the city who were able to be taken to the palace, and then served them at the banquet which followed.

The average age of the men selected for this ceremony was ninety two years. They were dressed in special uniforms for the occasion. The washing of feet took place in the hall of ceremonies in the palace.

Six archbishops and three archdukes/dames assisted the Emperor. Included in the number were Archduke Franz Ferdinand, heir presumptive to the throne, who carried the water with which the Emperor laved the feet of the aged men.

Following this ceremony a banquet was served, at which Francis Joseph personally waited upon the old men.

Each man was then presented with the 15 kreutzers of alms.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 12.—Little Katherine Elizabeth Morris, favorite grandchild of Senator Clark of Montana, called on President Roosevelt yesterday, and he gave her a big red rose. She was taken to the White House by her grandfather, and the President left a conference with several Senators and Representatives to have a chat with her.

The intense public interest taken in the fate of Charles L. Tucker is emphasized daily in the "Tucker Editor's" mail. Men and women send letters by the hundreds telling why they think Tucker should or should not be executed. While the BOSTON AMERICAN is taking no side in the argument, it is much interested to receive the opinions of so many of its readers.

Here is a word of warning to petitioners. Many letters for and against the young prisoner have been received, and those early because the senders fail to indicate in the coupon printed daily in the AMERICAN whether they wish Tucker's sentence commuted or wish to see him go to the electric chair.

If instructions are followed, it is simple enough to register your opinion. Directions are printed daily in the AMERICAN, and are explicit. On the coupon are found the words "be" and "be not." If you wish Tucker's sentence to be commuted, cross out the "be not." If you think that he ought to go to the chair, cross out the "be."

Of course, you wish to have your opinion properly classified, so fill out the coupon carefully, and be sure to indicate, by crossing out one or the other words printed in black type, just what you think.

The BOSTON AMERICA will send a magnificent photograph of Governor Guild to each of the five persons sending the most convincing letters on either side of the question daily. These photographs are twelve inches by fifteen in size, and are handsomely mounted. The list of winners will be printed every day.

When Mrs. Lucy Tucker visited her son, Charles Louis, in the East Cambridge jail yesterday, he gave her a message for the public.

"I want you to thank all the community for signing the petition in my favor, mamma," he said.

"Everyone has been so kind and so loyal. Thank them all for me."

For an hour Mrs. Tucker talked earnestly with her son. When she left his face was streamed down her face.

"Next Thursday is Louie's birthday," she explained to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter. "On the 19th he will be twenty-four. It seems only a few short years ago that he was a little boy, looking forward eagerly to his birthday presents; waiting silently for the great day, and then begging me to tell beforehand what he was to get.

"To-day we both felt terribly when he spoke of his birthday next week.

"Louie is quite well and lately has gained in weight. He is still very careful about his dress and every week I take him clean linen.

"He is not allowed to write any letters now, but spends most of his time drawing and writing in a diary which he keeps.

"Mr. Tuttle went with me to see Louie, but the Sheriff would not allow them to see each other.

"Louie was bitterly disappointed, for he and Mr. Tuttle have written to each other a long time and have become fast friends."

Mrs. Tucker took her usual box of dainty home cooking for her son, and that his Easter might not be entirely devoid of joy a ray of sunshine she took him a pot of Easter lilies.

Next Wednesday she will carry over his birthday dinner in a box. From now until then she will be busy making the birthday cake and all the other delicacies.

PRIZE WINNING LETTERS.

Here are the five most convincing letters received in this morning's mail.

To the writers of each the BOSTON AMERICAN will forward a large photograph of Governor Guild.

RECALLS BORDEN CASE.

TUCKER EDITOR:

I believe Governor Guild ought to commute the sentence of Charles L. Tucker because the power to do so was vested in his office to be exercised in just such cases as this. I do not know that Tucker is innocent. He may be guilty. But there is a doubt about it, and in a few years new facts may be discovered that will put a new aspect on the case. There was evidence to convict Lizzie Borden that there was against Tucker and yet Lizzie was freed.

OPPOSED TO MURDER.

TUCKER EDITOR:

I do not believe in any kind of murder. Is it right to murder you or me the life of another in the form of electrocution? Even if the criminal did take the life of a human that does not mean to say that we should take his life. Two wrongs will never make a right. I have been a constant reader of the BOSTON AMERICAN and do not believe Tucker guilty. MISS M. BLAIR.

EVIDENCE FAILS.

TUCKER EDITOR:

The question has arisen, shall the death sentence of Charles L. Tucker be commuted to life imprisonment? My emphatic reply would be Yes. While the circumstantial evidence which has been gathered and magnified may show him possible, or even probably guilty, I would like to ask every good sound-minded father if he considers this sufficient proof that the life of this young man should be forfeited?

You may argue that others have been executed on no stronger evidence than we have against Tucker. Is that a reason why such executions should continue? We have no absolute proof that Charles L. Tucker is guilty of the murder of Mabel Page, and the hope that would be granted him is time in which to prove his innocence. Yours sincerely,

J. A. FARNUM.
No. 38 Lake street, Worcester.

WHILE GUILTY IS SILENT.

TUCKER EDITOR:

It is every good citizens' duty to uphold the law that governs our lives and property. I believe that Charles L. Tucker had a fair and honest trial, for no circumstantial evidence goes, but the strongest in the taking of life on such evidence, as there is always a doubt while the guilty remain silent. E. F. SMITH.

JOINS WOMEN'S APPEAL.

TUCKER EDITOR:

I want to add my appeal to that of many others, mothers, wives and sisters, to his excellency, the Governor, praying that he may commute the sentence of Charles L. Tucker to life imprisonment, and by so doing give him a chance to prove his innocence, for I believe, as do many thousands of others, that no man should be put to death on purely circumstantial evidence, and that he is innocent of the crime for which he is sentenced to die.

All Ready for the Cheerful Strike

The Mine Owners Won't Arbitrate! of Course Not. WHY SHOULD THEY?

The other day there was a talk between the miners who dig out the coal and the mine "owners" who declare through Mr. Baer that God has given the coal to them to be peddled out according to their sweet will.

Nothing was accomplished at this meeting. Mr. Baer expressed the sentiments of the mine owners when he said that the workers talked about "the brotherhood of man and such rot," but did not get down to talking common sense.

Naturally when a man "owns" the mines, has millions of tons of coal stored and is otherwise READY, it does seem extremely ridiculous to talk about such antiquated nonsense as "the brotherhood of man."

The coal strike undoubtedly must be gone through with. And as you, the dear public, HAVE GOT TO PAY THE BILL you might as well read about it from time to time.

The mine owners and the men that work in the mines had an agreement for a certain term. That term has expired. The mine workers wish an agreement for a new term. THEY ARE WILLING TO SUBMIT THAT AGREEMENT TO ARBITRATION.

The mine owners have officially rejected all the suggestions of the workers, including arbitration.

The workmen still hope for a peaceable solution. They are making every effort to reach an agreement and get back to work. But they won't get back. It is quite clear that the eloquent Mr. Baer and his associates want to use this nice, pleasant Summer IN SMASHING UP THE UNION and starving out the men.

If you are a cold-headed business man you can hardly blame them.

We are a long way from any important election. The mine owners can bleed the public and starve the workers now in safety.

Experience teaches them that in six months, when the election comes on, you—the public—will have forgotten all about to-day's troubles. You will be ready to cast your little votes to put their men in Congress, THEIR JUDGES ON THE BENCH, THEIR GOVERNORS in office.

They count upon your charming forgetfulness. And what is more, THEY HAVE JUST LEARNED IN NEW YORK STATE HOW EASY IT IS TO STEAL THE ELECTION ANYHOW IN CASE VOTES FAIL TO GIVE IT TO THEM.

No wonder Mr. Baer and his hard-headed, far-seeing friends contemplate joyously the coming strike.

They have millions of tons of coal piled up beside the railroad tracks FOR WHICH YOU WILL PAY DOUBLE PRICES.

Their payrolls will be discontinued and their income will be doubled.

Isn't that a pleasant arrangement? For a few months, while they starve their workmen into submission, they will have no wages to pay, and you—the public—will pay them more than you ever did before for coal. Would it not almost prove insanity in them if they failed to force a strike? How could any "good business" man resist such an opportunity!

The mine-owning gentlemen are doubly and trebly ready for this strike.

THEY HAVE ESTABLISHED IN PENNSYLVANIA WHAT THEY ARE PLEASED TO CALL A "MOUNTED CONSTABULARY."

This is about the same kind of a constabulary that the English have maintained in Ireland for many years, the same kind that they have now in the Transvaal, where they beat the Boers.

This new constabulary, needless to say, is bossed by State officials THAT ARE OWNED BY THE COAL TRUST.

In the other coal strikes there have been disagreeable parades of the strikers and their wives and children. BUT THE NEW MOUNTED CONSTABULARY WILL TAKE CARE OF SUCH OFFENSIVE DEMONSTRATIONS. A WELL-ARMED MOUNTED PRIVATE POLICE BELONGING TO THE COAL BARONS WILL KEEP THE WORKERS SHUT UP IN THEIR HUTS AND TEACH THEM BETTER MANNERS IF THEY SPEAK OFFENSIVELY OF MR. BAER.

One mine-owning concern announces, quite as a matter of course, THAT IT HAS ORDERED TEN THOUSAND CARTRIDGES. That concern evidently means to give to workmen on strike and to their families "some unanswerable arguments."

The mine owners have the public at their mercy.

They think they have the workmen at their mercy.

They have already for sale twenty million tons of coal, on which they will make an extraordinary profit.

They own the State government, the Governor and not a few judges tried and true.

They have a new mounted constabulary, paid by the people, to canter through the mining regions—to shoot and club the people if necessary.

They have all the cartridges they need and plenty of money to buy more.

Would they not be foolish, from their point of view, if they failed to precipitate a strike?

If we read that the miners, the WORKERS, had ordered ten thousand cartridges; if we read that THEY had organized a body of mounted, armed men to be used in the strike, we should hear fine talk about anarchy.

But, of course, it is all right for mine owners who want to rob the people and starve out a big body of workers to lay in their cartridges and organize their shooting constabulary. It is a thoroughly settled principle of our civilization that you may shoot to protect a dollar, BUT YOU MUST NOT LIFT A FINGER OR EVEN TALK LOUD IN THE CAUSE OF A HUNGRY FAMILY OR A HARD-WORKING MAN.

Ten thousand cartridges for one owner and ten thousand injunctions against his men if he calls for them!

Workers, get into politics! Choose your own Governors and judges! Fight with the ballot!

Little Editorials from the People

WHY NOT HAVE A MUNICIPAL ICE PLANT?

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

The fee men collect a toll of about $1,000,000 or more per annum from the Boston ice. This is a perpetual income. The city is going to great expense in erecting the Charles river dam. These are to assets to meet this liability but the ordinary taxpayers' contributions. To meet this expense build handsome ice houses, and not the frightful shacks one now sees in the suburbs on the river banks, and harvest the ice. This income in perpetuity managed by a competent board would meet all the liabilities incurred, and have a very large surplus. You can borrow $10,000,000 on the asset. Here is a way your children's fires will be saved, the taxpayer's pocket will be protected, the ice men will get their deserts, the whole project will cost you nothing, and Bostonians will own their ice plant for the production of pure ice.

The question now is: Have Bostonians the spirit, advanced brains and boldness enough to concede and ability to carry out this roughly outlined project, fraught with possible and tangible financial results?

WHERE DO THE COAL TRUST MAGNATES BELONG?

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Here is a true story of the coal strike of 1902. The blue were full and coal went to $20 per ton. After the strike trouble had cleared away one member of a certain company paid up $200,000 of mortgages on real estate in a New England town. Coal at $6 pays a profit, so every unlucky consumer at $20 had his pocket picked of $14 just as cleanly as if done by a sneak thief. Now, where is the power to decide that such business is equivalent to highway robbery, put trust managers where they belong, and give the public justice?

FAIR PLAY.

When John D. Comes to Town

By James J. Montague

JOHN D. could buy the Ozarks for a double-bunkered links,
And lay the Mississippi out in private skating rinks;
He need but take his pen in hand and write a check or two
To get a quitclaim deed for all the city of St. Lou;
He might have all Missouri for a modern oil-tank site,
But he can't come to old New York till Hadley says: "All right!"

OLD JOHN just winks his small green eye, and Rogers does a dance;
All Wall Street writhes convulsively as stocks and bonds advance;
Cassatt gets batted in the slats, George Gould emits a yelp
Of baffled rage, and Morgan shouts pathetically for help.
But though John D. works miracles in quite an off-hand way,
He can't stroll up Fifth avenue till Hadley says: "O. K."

JOHN D. could build a battleship of fifty carat gold,
And load her to the Plimsoll line with diamonds in her hold;
Great emeralds and rubies he could have for sailing lights,
And ship Joe Choate and Grover in the bilge as middlelights;
But he can't walk up Cherry Hill or down Ninth avenue
Or beat it up the Bowery till Hadley tells him to.

I COULD not buy a door-yard in Missouri's wildest woods,
Or get a log raft that would float my store of worldly goods.
But I can go where'er I please in calm serenity,
And Hadley doesn't wait to slick a process-man on me.
You might imagine from the trend of this contented song
That I don't yearn for John D.'s wealth, but that's where you'd be wrong.

Years, following years, steal something each day;
At last of all
Thus from ourselves away.

PERCY MAKES A HIT AS A PRESTIDIGITATEUR

The Fire of Spring

By Wex Jones

RED PATSY is a dirty kid whose playground is the street.
And there he makes things lively for the cop who pounds the beat.
He's a ragged little urchin, a grimy little roughneck,
Whose beach is by the gutter, whose headers are the pave.
He's never breathed the quickening air that blesses field and wood,
But Patsy all the same declares that March is "to de good;"
He feels the ichor of the Spring ablaze in every vein,
For 'tis now the Holy Terror Nine goes hustling out to train.

FROM tenement and alley the Holy Terrors come,
Their tatters flapping in the breeze, their blue-cold fingers numb;
There's not much show of uniforms in the Holy Terror squad,
As the "men" come bravely trotting up along the asphalt sod.
They haven't signed a contract, and they haven't drawn a red,
But they're heart and soul with Patsy, and he knows they're on the dead.
So he swaggers, swell and chesty, feels another John M'Graw,
As he signals to the Terrors with a dirty little paw.

OH, it's hard these days for passers-by to know just where they're at,
When Red Patsy shows the tyro how to swing his home-made bat;
For the air seems full of flying balls, the street of darting imps,
And collision with a sprinter always gives the walker crimps.
Yet as Patsy shouts his orders and his trusty men obey,
The disregarded citizen will stop to watch the play;
For it somehow makes one doubt that life is altogether vain
To see the Holy Terrors, how whole-heartedly they train.

The Downfall of "Elijah" Dowie.

By Willis J. Abbot.

THE Prophet Elijah III., known to the unbelieving and profane as Dowie the Charlatan, is not the first great popular leader to be swamped by a too rapid acquisition of riches.

What, indeed, does it profit a man to get the spending of millions of dollars if at last the people who put up the coin dethrone him because of his extravagance, hypocrisy, misrepresentations, exaggerations, misuse of investments, tyranny and hubris?

We should think that a Prophet suffering from this array of mental failings would be without honor in his own or any other country.

Dowie and Zion thrived on persecution. Both are cases even a bad one will. They are disintegrating under toleration.

When the latter day Elijah first came to Chicago, poor and alone, save for his family, which has now deserted him, he took small quarters and in a cheap hall began to preach his doctrines, and to cure, or pretend to cure, diseases without medicine and without cost.

His theology disturbed no one, but when it came to doctoring for nothing he ran up against a vested interest, and invited trouble.

Whether by luck or by shrewd forethought, Dowie had pitched his first tent in the neighborhood where medical colleges cluster about the great West Chicago Hospital.

Now, there may be something more infuriating to the average medical student than healing without charge, but if so it has not been discovered and named.

Anyhow, they went out after Dowie, exploded bombs at his doorway, broke bottles of substituted hydrogen in his meetings, sang ribald songs in the midst of his most fervid exhortations, and so often battered him and his converts with eggs and vegetables of the Pliocene age that the police of the neighboring station grew weary of responding to fire calls. The newspapers gave full pages to the fight.

Through it all, Elijah went on meek, lowly and unresisting, likening himself to the martyrs of blessed memory, until when the medics got tired he numbered his followers by tens of thousands, and was buying great hotels to serve as philanstheries for them.

Thus started on persecution the movement grew until it culminated in building Zion City, with 10,000 people, all yielding implicit obedience—and tithes—to the Prophet.

Then, success and toleration having been conquered, Dowie began to go to pieces. No longer was he the martyr, the victorious sacrifice for all his people. No more did his lungs inhale unpurified bedroom, or his refulgent beard invite the impact of the cracked egg.

He announced himself the reincarnation of Elijah, but not for him a home in a cave and food furnished by ravens. He built himself a palace out of his people's funds. When he drove, it was behind horses and drove carriage. At his country place in Michigan a twelve-oared barge carried him and his family over the lake, and a guard of honor always lined up on his private dock to salute him on disembarking.

He circled the world for converts. That he made a few converted, but he travelled with a lordly disregard of expense which spoke a Pharaoh's magnificence.

Finally he touched one point which the steel magnates of to-day and the Prophets of Old have in common—he concluded he would like three wives, and discovered a divine dispensation to that end.

Then fell Dowie. "Quickly retire," says his rebellious flock. "Further interference will precipitate complete exposure."

So too much money will undo a man! How happy we who have it not should be that most of it is given to the great and good, like John D. Rockefeller, Paul Revere Jones, John W. Gates or Charlie Schwab, who may be trusted to use it so as to bring no injury to their fellows, nor any scandal upon themselves.

MRS. COOPER'S OWN STORY ON WITNESS STAND

Mrs. Cooper on witness Stand To-day

Woman Accused of the Murder of Young Charlie Northey Tells of Their Relationship and Its Tragic Ending---"Northey Only a Boy," She Says.

Special to the Boston American.

AUGUSTA, Me., April 13.—Mrs. Alice F. Cooper, the young matron who is on trial for the alleged murder of Charles D. Northey, Jr., at her home last October, took the witness stand in her own behalf at 10:43 o'clock to-day and told the entire story of her acquaintance with the boy she is accused of killing, the details of the incidents that led up to what proved his fatal call upon her, and just exactly what took place in the house on the day of the tragedy.

The climax of interest in this long and sensational trial was reached when the slender, pale-faced woman walked from her seat beside her husband to the witness stand. There was a look of determination on her face and, although she made her replies in a low voice, her tones were firm and free from trembling.

"NORTHEY ONLY A BOY."

"Charley was only a boy," said Mrs. Cooper. "He used to play tag with the children and was as much of a child as any of them. We talked late the night he was converted. He was crying and I put my arm around him.

"They played kissing games at the Allen party and Charley kissed me during one of the games. Kissing was general. Everybody did it during the evening."

Questioned by Mr. Heath, Mrs. Cooper told the story:

"I am thirty-four years old. I was married in Hallowell in June, 1890, when I was eighteen years old. I have three children. I have had two.

"We lived in Hallowell four months after marriage, and then went to Windsor. A few months later we rebuilt the house we now live in and have lived there since."

"When did you join the church?" asked Mr. Heath.

"Eight years ago."

"You had done your own work at home?"

"Yes, sir."

"Besides that," continued Mrs. Cooper, "I carried the children to school mornings and have helped my husband by carrying work back and forth.

"Charles Northey came to our place the last of November, 1902. He slept upstairs with Lore all the time he was there, about fifteen months. My husband and I slept downstairs.

"Charley worked in the shop with my husband and boarded with us. He used to play games evenings with the children. He usually went to the Grange Thursday nights and home Saturdays. He was very fond of the children and he enjoyed playing with them. The children were all fond of him. He was very silent except with the children. He talked enough to them.

"Charley and I practiced music one or two evenings the first Winter he was there.

"Charley was only a boy. He used to play tag with the children, and was as much of a child as any of them.

"In May, 1904, he began to go to Sunday School, and after that he and I were brought more together. We held prayer meetings Wednesday nights, and he always attended that Summer.

"In September Charley was converted, and after that we were together more. We talked over religious matters a good deal. We talked late the night he was converted. He was crying and I put my arm around him.

"That Fall we played croquinole a good deal. The children used to play the game and then Charley and my husband and I got to playing. My husband never played very well, but Charley and I became quite expert. We played very often and we played every evening.

Taught to Skate by Northey.

"This kept up until my husband was hurt in December. That Winter we went skating a good deal on Gully Brook. Henry Cooper and his wife and children used to go and one of my children usually went also. My husband and Charley went. I couldn't skate very well, but Charley could, and he taught me.

"We also went to the grange that Winter. Charley used to go with my husband and the children and myself. The whole

250,000 Homeless by Fury of Vesuvius; NAPLES ASKS HELP

Hundreds Killed Outright, Thousands Face Famine and Destitution.

NAPLES, April 13.—Four terrible days have passed since the eruption of Vesuvius began, and Naples now calls upon the world for assistance.

Five thousand homes have been utterly destroyed. Half a score of villages have been either buried beneath volcanic ashes or rendered uninhabitable by the lava flow.

Two hundred and fifty thousand penniless, hungry, homeless refugees throng the city, and the question of providing for them is most grave and serious.

The sum of $300,000 has been subscribed to the relief fund, but this amount is so inadequate that it does not affect the situation.

Enormous sums must be furnished at once. Naples needs help, and instantly. Not only must food be furnished, but shelter and clothing for the absolutely destitute.

Misery Illimitable.

Misery illimitable marks the condition of the city and surrounding country, and Italy has practically admitted an inability to deal effectively with the situation.

The fund raised by the Duke of Aosta is barely sufficient for an adequate relief plan for a single day.

In many of the villages, filled to overflowing with refugees from the ruined towns, the people are rioting and demanding bread.

The rain of ashes over Naples and the Vesuvian zone continued all day yesterday. Shortly after midnight the detonations and eruptions from the crater were far more awe-inspiring and frightful than at any time in the last week, and the hope inspired by the clearing mornings from Professor Matteucci in the Royal Observatory is gradually fading before the steady downpour of ashes and cinders and the persistent recurrence of violent eruptions.

There can be no appreciation in America of the frightful suffering and misery existing here by the eruption of Mount Vesuvius. It is impossible to comprehend the situation adequately here within constant sound as well of sight of the volcano.

Refugees with rain-covered heads and bodies flee into Naples, telling hysterically of the destruction of villages, of decapitated or entire communities and of the hideous death of those who waited too long before fleeing from the doomed towns.

Actual misery and desolation are to be found in the dearly reports filed here day after day showing the actual destruction caused.

It is known that more than 5,000 houses have been entirely destroyed in the villages on the Vesuvian slope and other thousands have been rendered utterly uninhabitable.

The destitution caused is found not only among the villages, however, for many in Naples have suffered badly.

Many houses here have given way under the weight of the sand and ashes, and Neapolitans and villagers alike seek shelter in the public buildings and wherever they can find a roof to cover them.

MOUNT TACOMA, IN WASHINGTON, SAID TO BE IN ERUPTION

PORTLAND, Or., April 13.—A dispatch from North Yakima, Washington, says that word was received to-day from John Campbell, who is holding claims for Yakima men at the eastern base of Mount Tacoma, that the mountain on Wednesday hurled out ashes.

"The mountain has been shrouded in clouds for some time, and on Tuesday morning rumbling was heard by Campbell. Tuesday night smoke was observed. It was not until Wednesday morning that Campbell paid any attention to the noise, when a wind brought ashes from the mountain peak to the place where he was working.

YANKEE ATHLETES HURT BY A GIANT WAVE

ENTIRE TEAM NEARLY WASHED OVERBOARD FROM STEAMSHIP'S DECKS.

GIBRALTAR, April 13.—Six members of the American athletic team which is to take part in the olympic games at Athens narrowly escaped death on April 4, one day out from New York, while standing on the deck of the steamer Barbarossa. A gigantic wave struck the ship, throwing the men about like feathers, half drowning them and more or less injuring the entire six, so that it is believed some will be unable to take part in the games.

The Barbarossa touched here to-day and reported the accident. While the men were standing forward of the pilot house watching the mountainous waves breaking beneath the ship, one monster broke aboard, dashing the entire party to the deck. It was a miracle that they were not all washed overboard.

H. L. Hillman, the quarter-mile, suffered a laceration of the left knee. J. S. Mitchell, the weight thrower, was lifted from his feet, thrown to the deck with awful force and sustained a dislocation of his left shoulder. H. W. Kerrigan, high jumper; M. P. Sheridan, discus thrower, and F. A. Hornaman, swimmer, and Harvey Cohn, the distance man, all receiving numerous injuries.

The ship physician reports that all are doing as well as can be expected. It is doubtful whether Mitchell and Hillman will be able to start in the games. Providing the others continue to improve as rapidly as they are at present they will be in condition.

All Ready for the Cheerful Strike

The Mine Owners Won't Arbitrate: of Course Not. WHY SHOULD THEY?

The other day there was a talk between the miners who dig out the coal and the mine "owners" who declare through Mr. Baer that God has given the coal to them to be peddled out according to their sweet will.

Nothing was accomplished at this meeting. Mr. Baer expressed the sentiments of the mine owners when he said that the workers talked about "the brotherhood of man and such rot," but did not get down to talking common sense.

Naturally when a man "owns" the mines, has millions of tons of coal stored and is otherwise READY, it does seem extremely ridiculous to talk about such antiquated nonsense as "the brotherhood of man."

The coal strike undoubtedly must be gone through with. And as you, the dear public, HAVE GOT TO PAY THE BILL you might as well read about it from time to time.

The mine owners and the men that work in the mines had an agreement for a certain term. That term has expired. The mine workers wish an agreement for a new term. THEY ARE WILLING TO SUBMIT THAT AGREEMENT TO ARBITRATION.

The mine owners have officially rejected all the suggestions of the workers, including arbitration.

The workmen still hope for a peaceable solution. They are making every effort to reach an agreement and get back to work. But they won't get back. It is quite clear that the eloquent Mr. Baer and his associates want to use this nice, pleasant Summer IN SMASHING UP THE UNION and starving out the men.

If you are a cold-headed business man you can hardly blame them. We are a long way from any important election. The mine owners can bleed the public and starve the workers now in safety.

Experience teaches them that in six months, when the election comes on, you—the public—will have forgotten all about to-day's troubles. You will be ready to cast your little votes to put their men in Congress, THEIR JUDGES ON THE BENCH, THEIR GOVERNORS in office.

They count upon your charming forgetfulness. And what is more, THEY HAVE JUST LEARNED IN NEW YORK STATE HOW EASY IT IS TO STEAL THE ELECTION ANYHOW IN CASE VOTES FAIL TO GIVE IT TO THEM.

No wonder Mr. Baer and his hard-headed, far-seeing friends contemplate joyously the coming strike.

They have millions of tons of coal piled up beside the railroad tracks FOR WHICH YOU WILL PAY DOUBLE PRICES.

Their payrolls will be discontinued and their income will be doubled.

Isn't that a pleasant arrangement? For a few months, while they starve their workmen into submission, they will have no wages to pay, and you—the public—will pay them more than you ever did before for coal. Would it not almost prove insanity in them if they failed to force a strike! How could any "good business" man resist such an opportunity?

The mine-owning gentlemen are doubly and trebly ready for this strike.

THEY HAVE ESTABLISHED IN PENNSYLVANIA WHAT THEY ARE PLEASED TO CALL A "MOUNTED CONSTABULARY."

This is about the same kind of a constabulary that the English have maintained in Ireland for many years, the same kind that they have now in the Transvaal, where they beat the Boers.

This new constabulary, needless to say, is bossed by State officials THAT ARE OWNED BY THE COAL TRUST.

In the other coal strikes there have been disagreeable parades of the strikers and their wives and children. BUT THE NEW MOUNTED CONSTABULARY WILL TAKE CARE OF SUCH OFFENSIVE DEMONSTRATIONS. A WELL-ARMED MOUNTED PRIVATE POLICE BELONGING TO THE COAL BARONS WILL KEEP THE WORKERS SHUT UP IN THEIR HUTS AND TEACH THEM BETTER MANNERS IF THEY SPEAK OFFENSIVELY OF MR. BAER.

One mine-owning concern announces, quite as a matter of course, THAT IT HAS ORDERED TEN THOUSAND CARTRIDGES. That concern evidently means to give to workmen on strike and to their families "some unanswerable arguments."

The mine owners have the public at their mercy.

They think they have the workmen at their mercy.

They have already for sale twenty million tons of coal, on which they will make an extraordinary profit.

They own the State government, the Governor and not a few judges tried and true.

They have a new mounted constabulary, paid by the people, to canter through the mining regions—to shoot and club the people if necessary.

They have all the cartridges they need and plenty of money to buy more.

Would they not be foolish, from their point of view, if they failed to precipitate a strike?

If we read that the miners, the WORKERS, had ordered ten thousand cartridges; if we read that THEY had organized a body of mounted, armed men to be used in the strike, we should hear fine talk about anarchy.

But, of course, it is all right for mine owners who want to rob the people and starve out a big body of workers to lay in their cartridges and organize their shooting constabulary. It is a thoroughly settled principle of our civilization that you may shoot to protect a dollar, BUT YOU MUST NOT LIFT A FINGER OR EVEN TALK LOUD IN THE CAUSE OF A HUNGRY FAMILY OR A HARD-WORKING MAN.

Ten thousand cartridges for one owner and ten thousand injunctions against his men if he calls for them!

Workers, get into politics! Choose your own Governors and judges! Fight with the ballot!

Little Editorials from the People

WHY NOT HAVE A MUNICIPAL ICE PLANT?

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

The Ice men collect a tariff of about $1,000,000 or more per annum from the Bostonians. This is a perpetual income. The city is going to spend enormous sums in erecting the Charles river dam. There are no assets to cover this liability but the ordinary taxpayers' contributions. To meet this expense build a municipal ice business, and oust the frightful shacks one now sees in the suburbs, on the river banks, and harvest the ice. This income in perpetuity managed by a competent board would meet all the liabilities incurred, and have a very large surplus. You can harvest 840,000 tons on the Basset. Here is a way your children's lives will be saved, the taxpayer's pocket will be protected, the ice men will get their dividends, the whole project will cost you nothing, and Bostonians will own their ice plant for the production of pure ice.

The question now is: Have Bostonians civic spirit, educated brains and boldness enough to conceive and ability to carry out this roughly outlined project, fraught with blessings and tangible financial results?

WHERE DO THE COAL TRUST MAGNATES BELONG?

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Here is a true story of the coal strike of 1902. The bins were full and coal went to $20 per ton. After the strike trouble had cleared away one member of a certain company paid up $200,000 of mortgages on real estate in a New England town. Coal at $6 pays a profit, as every unbiased coal user knows, of $20 per ton. Now, where is the difference between the man who picked $14 out of his pocket and the man who picked $14 out of his neighbor's pocket? Now, where is the power to decide that such business is equivalent to highway robbery, put trust managers where they belong, and give the public justice.

When John D. Comes to Town

By James J. Montague

JOHN D. could buy the Ozarks for a double-bunkered links,
And lay the Mississippi out in private skating rinks;
He need but take his pen in hand and write a check or two
To get a quitclaim deed for all the city of St. Lou;
He might have all Missouri for a modern oil-tank site,
But he can't come to old New York till Hadley says: "All right!"

OLD JOHN just winks his small green eye, and Rogers does a dance;
All Wall Street writhes convulsively as stocks and bonds advance;
Cassatt gets batted in the slats, George Gould emits a yelp
Of baffled rage, and Morgan shouts pathetically for help,
But though John D. works miracles in quite an off-hand way,
He can't stroll up Fifth avenue till Hadley says: "O, K!"

JOHN D. could build a battleship of fifty carat gold,
And load her to the Plimsoll line with diamonds in her hold;
Great emeralds and rubies he could have for sailing lights,
And ship Joe Choate and Grover in the bilge as midshipmites;
But he can't walk up Cherry Hill or down Ninth avenue
Or beat it up the Bowery till Hadley tells him to.

I COULD not buy a door-yard in Missouri's wildest woods,
Or get a log raft that would float my store of worldly goods.
But I can go where'er I please in calm serenity,
And Hadley doesn't wait to slick a process-man on me.
You might imagine from the trend of this contented song
That I don't yearn for John D.'s wealth, but that's where you'd be wrong.

Years, following years, steal something away;
At last 'Tis from ourselves and HORACE.

The Fire of Spring

By Wex Jones

RED PATSY is a dirty kid whose playground is the street.
And there he makes things lively for the cop who pounds the beat.
He's a ragged little urchin, a grimy little kid,
Whose beach is by the gutter, whose mead is by the pave.
He's never breathed the quickening air that blesses field and wood,
But Patsy all the same declares that March is "de good;"
He feels the ichor of the Spring ablaze in every vein,
For 'tis now the Holy Terror Nine goes hustling out to train.

FROM tenement and alley the Holy Terrors come.
Their tatters flapping in the breeze, their blue-cold fingers numb;
There's not much show of uniforms in the Holy Terror squad,
As the "men" come bravely trotting up along the asphalt sod.
They haven't signed a contract, and they haven't drawn a red,
But they're heart and soul with Patsy, and he knows they're on the dead.
So he swaggers, swell and chesty, feels another John M'Graw,
As he signals to the Terrors with a dirty little paw.

OH, it's hard these days for passers-by to know just where they're at,
When Red Patsy shows the tyro how to swing his home-made bat;
For the air seems full of flying balls, the street of darting imps,
And collision with a sprinter always gives the walker crimps.
Yet as Patsy shouts his orders and his trusty men obey,
The disregarded citizen will stop to watch the play;
For it somehow makes one doubt that life is altogether vain
To see the Holy Terrors, how whole-heartedly they train.

The Downfall of "Elijah" Dowie.

By Willis J. Abbot.

THE Prophet Elijah III., known to the unbelieving and profane as Dowie the Charlatan, is not the first great popular leader to be swamped by a too rapid acquisition of riches.

What, indeed, does it profit a man to get the unceiling of millions of dollars if at last the people who put up the coin dethrone him because of his extravagance, hypocrisy, misrepresentations, exaggerations, misuse of investments, tyranny and injustice? We should think that a Prophet suffering from this array of mental ills was quite well without honor in his own or any other country.

Down and Zion thrived on persecution—as any cause, even a bad one, will. They are disinterested under toleration.

When the latter day Elijah first came to Chicago, poor and alone, save for his family, which has now deserted him, he took unsuild quarters and in a cheap hall began to preach his doctrines, and to cure, or pretend to cure, diseases without medicine and without cost.

His theology disturbed no one, but upon it came to absorbing for nothing which he made any 'is not reserved, but he traveled with a bodily disregard of expense which only a steel magnate could emulate.

Finally he touched one point which the steel magnates of Gary and the Prophets of Old have in common—he concluded he would like three wives, and discovered a divine dispensation to that end.

Then fell Dowie. "Quickly retire," says his rebellious flock. "Further interference will precipitate complete exposure."

So too much money will undo a man! How happy we who have it not should be that most of it is given to the great and good, like John D. Rockefeller, "Tom" Ryan, John W. Gates or Charlie Schwab, who may be trusted to use it so as to bring no injury to their fellows, nor any scandal upon themselves.

Through it all, Elijah went on, meek, lowly and unresisting, likening himself to the martyrs of blessed memory, until when the medics got tired he numbered his followers by tens of thousands, and was buying great hotels to serve as philanteries for them.

Thus started on persecution the movement grew until it culminated in building Zion City, with 10,000 people, all yielding implicit obedience—and to-day the Prophet is a walker crimps.

Then, success and toleration having been conquered, Dowie began to go to pieces. No longer was he the martyr, the vicarious sacrifice for all his people. No more did his lungs inhale sulphureted hydrogen, or his reticent beard invite the inmact of the ancient egg.

He announced himself the reincarnation of Elijah, but not for him a home in a cave and food furnished by ravens. He built himself a palace out of his people's funds, which has now deserted him, he took sumuild quarters and in a cheap hall began to preach his doctrines, and to cure, or pretend to cure, diseases without medicine and without cost.

His theology disturbed no one, but upon it came to absorbing for nothing which he made any 'is not reserved, but he traveled with a bodily disregard of expense which only a steel magnate could emulate.
